Blanton Admits 'Deal' To Replace Police Aid; U.S. Drive Traps 1,909

Reveals Letter to Maj. Brown on Plan of Retiring Bean.

Defends His Action Under Severe Quiz

By J. Bernard McDonnell.

Representative Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, yesterday yielded to the House District Crime Committee proof of the "deal" he had made with Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, to supplant Inspector Thaddeus R. Bean and make Inspector Albert J. Headley assistant superintendent in Bean's place.

The proof was in letters exchanged between Mr. Blanton, then at Abilene, Tex., and Maj. Brown. The letters were presented to the committee by Mr. Blanton. The committee already had asked for and received from Maj. Brown copies of the correspondence.

A few minutes later after the hard-fighting Texan had left the witness chair at the end of tumultuous morning and afternoon sessions, he took the floor in the House to describe the "deal" as "a trivial matter" which would serve to show the House how Washington newspapers persecuted him. The House granted him three minutes in addition to the five to which he was entitled. He asked and obtained, however, leave "to revise and extend my remarks."

Blanton Leaves Quickly.

As word spread that Blanton intended to take the floor members of the crime committee left their offices and hurried to the floor. Representative Everett M. Dirksen, of Illinois, was on the floor when Blanton came in on crutches, favoring a sore foot which was encased in a felt slipper.

Within a few minutes Representative William T. Schulte, of Indiana, Chauncey W. Reed, of Illinois, Virginia E. Janckes, of Indiana and Theodore B. Werner, of South Dakota, were on the floor. Blanton, however, had not taken the floor on a question of personal privilege and had ceased his brief narration of the "gentlemen's agreement." He left the floor as committee members began to arrive.

He had given them warning he was indignant that he should be questioned by the committee, had threatened to leave the committee room if his commands were not obeyed, and had served notice on committee members he would take the fight to the floor of the house.

Warns of Finish Fight.

He said none of the things on the floor committee members had expected him to say. None arose to make reply, although they said, off the floor, they were awaiting expectantly the "revision and extension" of his remarks Blanton would put into the Congressional Record. Several years ago, Blanton narrowly escaped expulsion from the House because of matter he inserted in the record under the right to "extend and revise" his remarks.

Blanton did tell the House that he was "a man who when I start anything I keep it up; I do not forget it and let it be pigeonholed."

He had told the committee much the same thing. He had warned committee members, none of whom had been in the House as long as he, that they would learn, if they

Savannah Dock Swept by Fire

Million Dollar Loss Results in Soda Cargo Flame; Ship Ablaze.

By the Associated Press.

Savannah, Ga., March 15.—Fire in a cargo of nitrate of soda late today destroyed a terminal of the Ocean Steamship Co., a subsidiary of the Central of Georgia Railroad, and caught the old coastwise passenger boat City of Atlanta, causing damage placed by the steamship company at about $1,000,000.

Firefighting apparatus succeeded in keeping the fire in one dock but for a time it threatened the entire terminals of the Ocean Steamship Co.

The fire finally burned itself out after destroying about 500 feet of the dock, known locally as the Central of Georgia terminals, directly west of the main ocean steamship terminals.

Still afire, the City of Atlanta was pulled out of its slip, where it had been out of service for some time, and beached with its nose in the marsh of Hutchinsons Island, across the Savannah River.

The upper structure of the City of Atlanta was in flames, and so much water was being poured into the hull that the boat was sinking astern.

12,000 Agents Join in Raids; 12 Arrested in District Drive

$20,000 in Narcotics Seized Here; Arrests May Total 2,500.

By Robert De Vore.

In the greatest demonstration of law enforcement ever staged in the United States, 12,000 agents of the Treasury Department yesterday swept through the country—from the Atlantic to the Pacific oceans and from the Canadian to the Mexican borders—to terrorize organized crime, make known arrests of 1,909 persons and seize smuggled property and other contraband estimated to be worth several millions of dollars.

Twelve persons were caught in Washington, 11 being seized in connection with narcotic operations and one on a charge of evasion of income tax laws.

Treasury officials last night, in announcing the 1,909 total, estimated that when figures are all in fully 2,500 persons will have been taken into custody. Figures at that time did not include complete reports from New York, Seattle or the Honolulu districts.

Neither did they take into account the fact that at that time the Coast Guard on the high seas was seeking to overhaul six vessels, five of them of British registry. Five of the ship hunts were in the Atlantic, while the other was taking place in Pacific waters.

Nor did the figures, even the final estimates, take in fully the arrests estimated to have been made by the Alcohol Tax Unit. With 1,069 reported, W. R. Sayles, chief of the enforcement activities of the agency, estimated that his men

Quintuplets Become British Crown Wards

By the United Press.

Toronto, Ont., March 15.—Five baby girls—skyrocketed to fame and popularity by the accident of simultaneous birth—tonight passed under the protection of the British crown.

Against the protests of Mr. and Mrs. Olivia Dionne, parents of the quintuplets, the Ontario Legislature adopted a measure which makes the babies wards of the government.

As a gesture of opposition, Mr. and Mrs. Dionne and their other four children moved into the Dafoe Hospital, specially built home of the quintuplets, but were induced by Dr. Allan R. Dafoe, the babies' doctor, to leave after two hours.

France Indicts Switz Couple As 'Red' Spies

Americans Face Secret Trial With 30 Others in Espionage Plot.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, March 15.—Robert Gordon Switz and his wife, Marjorie, who have languished in jail for 15 months, were indicted today with 30 others accused as members of an international ring spying for Soviet Russia.

The Switzes, residents of East Orange, N. J., and New York, face secret trial early next month with 19 alleged accomplices. Many of the suspects allegedly were involved by the Switzes' admissions. Ten of those indicted are fugitives and Mme. Maria Schul is in prison in Finland, having been convicted there last year.

The American couple and nine others were arrested December 18, 1933, after secret service operatives had trailed them for eight months.

Mrs. Pauline Jacobsen Levine, 32, a third American involved, is one of the ten members of the bnad who disappeared before the round-up raids. Police have not identified her except to say she was a friend of Mrs. Switz.

Secret formulas for explosives and gases, plans for the industrial mobilization of French factories in the event of a conflict, and secret lectures delivered at the war school were revealed as having figured in the spy cases.

Switz, an aviator described as co-chief of the band with Benjamin Bercowitz, a Rumanian, told the investigating magistrate that he was sent to Europe by a mysterious stranger whom he met at Roosevelt Field, New York. He first went to London, he said.

Mrs. Switz, the former Marjorie Tilley, was alleged to have instructed members of the group in the reproduction of documents and figured prominently in the photographic work. Her staff, police said, consisted of Mlle. Madeleine Mermet, 23-year-old school teacher;

First-Day Sale Nets $529,838 In Stamp Rush

All Records Are Broken as Collectors Swarm Here for 'Farley' Issues.

In the greatest "stamp rush" of history, collectors from the entire country yesterday stormed the Philatelic Agency of the Postoffice Department and the Washington City Postoffice and purchased $529,838.95 worth of the so-called Farley ungummed and imperforate issues.

Sale of the 20 issues, which was well advertised by the collectors' indignation several weeks ago, when it became known that Postmaster General James A. Farley had presented ungummed and imperforate sheets of them to his friends and fellow Cabinet officers, was the greatest on record.

Dealers and individual collectors bought the sheets in veritable bundles. Some dealers purchased as many as $15,000 worth. The stamps are different from their brothers of the same issue now in use only in that they are without perforation and available in entire sheets or in blocks of four.

Sold at Face Value.

Sale of the sheets was conducted at the Philatelic Agency under the direction of Robert E. Fellers, superintendent of the division of stamps, and Herbert Chamberlain, philatelic agent. Sheet sales totaled $500,058.95.

At the city postoffice and at the Benjamin Franklin postoffice the stamps were sold in blocks of four, also ungummed and imperforate. There the sales totaled $29,780.

For a complete set of sheets of the 20 issues the buyers paid $190.30. The highest price for a single sheet was for the 16-cent air mail special delivery, which was worth $32. The cheapest sheet was of the 1-cent Yosemite, worth $2. Of course, the prices were for the actual face value of the stamps involved.

In selling more than $500,000 worth of stamps, the Philatelic Agency broke the record of $100,-

3 Thugs Slain in Mecca Mosque Trying to Kill King Ibn Saud

By the Associated Press.

Mecca, Saudi Arabia, March 15.—Three thugs stealing into ancient Mecca's most famous mosque were shot down and killed this morning as they attempted to assassinate tall, bearded Ibn Saud, "warrior king" of Saudi Arabia.

The assailants, men of Yemen, launched their sudden, daring attack as Ibn Saud and his son, the Crown Prince Emir Saud, joined 200,000 pilgrims in celebration of the sacred Mohammedan "feast of sacrifice."

The king's armed bodyguard shot two before they reached the spot where he stood. Emir Saud himself grappled with the third, staying his knife, until pistol shots stretched him lifeless.

They fell close to the sacred black stone, an object of especial reverence to every Mohammedan making the pilgrimage to Mecca, which followers of Islam believe the Angel Gabriel gave to Abraham.

An official announcement said "it has now been proved that the would-be assassins were Zeidis (presumably residents of the Zeidi River area in Trans-Jordan) from Yemen."

(Last year Ibn Saud heavily defeated the Imam Yahyi of Yemen in warfare started by border disputes, capturing the port of Hodeidah and other Yemen territory. A treaty concluded last May 13 ended the war, the Imam Yahya accepting Ibn Saud's peace conditions.)

"Investigations are still proceeding," the annuoncement said, "to ascertain their motive and find out whether they had any accomplices."

The Eed al-adha (feast of sacrifice) has as its highlight the cere-

As Post Lunged Toward Stratosphere

Post Rockets Ship Over U.S. 5 Miles in Air

Halts in Ohio as Oxygen Fails After 2,000-Mile Stratosphere Hop.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, March 15.—The second attempt of Wiley Post to set a new transcontinental airplane nonstop record in the stratosphere between Los Angeles and New York ended at 5:20 p. m. today when lack of oxygen forced him to land at the Cleveland Municipal Airport.

Post covered the distance of 2,163 miles "as the crow flies" in 8 hours and 4 minutes. His average speed was approximately 270 miles per hour.

The flier made an easy landing on the skids of his plane, the famous Winnie Mae, alighting on the belly of the ship without damage to himself or his craft. Most of the trip was flown at an altitude of greater than 30,000 feet.

Post was 60 miles east of Cleveland when he discovered his oxygen supply was dangerously low. He swung back to the airport here and made a "dead stick" landing.

As Post sped downward through the denser atmosphere, ice condensed on the induction coils of his motor and two cylinders "cut out." This did not, however, hamper the flier's maneuvers.

Maj. John Berry, superintendent of the airport, greeted Post as the aviator emerged smiling from the plane clad in his stratosphere flying suit. He quoted Post as saying: "Hello. I'm okay. I'm too deaf now to talk."

Post was hustled to the airport showers. Maj. Berry said he was "in good condition in every way."

The flier will remain at Cleveland tonight and will decide to-

Britain Cheers Peace Gesture By the Soviet

Stalin Announces He Will Join in Conversations With Eden.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 15.—British officials emphasized today that the announced participation of Joseph Stalin in conversations at Moscow with Capt. Anthony Eden will be as important from the standpoint of Anglo-Russian relations as the question of Soviet participation in a security system.

(It was announced officially in Moscow that Stalin, general secretary of the political bureau, personally will receive Capt. Eden, British lord privy seal, and that while the Russian leader will not take part in the formal negotiations, he and Eden are expected to discuss fully the questions of European peace.)

The impression was given here that both sides are eager to take advantage of conversations originally scheduled for the discussion of peace plans to strengthen relations between the two nations, although no specific questions affecting Russia and Britain have been mentioned.

Some diplomats said they observed a sharp upward trend in the interest of Russia and Britain for each other since the collapse of the Russo-American debt settlement plans.

The British indicated that Stalin decided to participate in the discussions beginning March 28 as a mark of appreciation for the first visit of a British government minister to Moscow since the war.

Ivan M. Maisky, Soviet ambassador to Britain, will join Capt. Eden in Berlin, where there will be conversations between the British and Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler March 25 and 26, and will accompany him

Shearer Charges Nine Senators With Communistic Affiliations

Big Navy Lobbyist Accuses Opponents of Cruiser Appropriations Bill at Inquiry; Prompt Denials Greet Accusations.

By the Associated Press

Quick denials last night greeted the latest sensation of William B. Shearer, enthusiastic big Navy lobbyist—an assertion that nine present or former Senators had Communistic affiliations.

A letter Shearer had written in 1929 was produced before the Senate munitions committee saying that of 14 Senators who had voted against a cruiser appropriation, nine were so listed by the Justice Department.

The 14 included Secretary Swanson, the late Senator Robert M. La Follette, and of present members, Ashurst of Arizona, McKellar of Tennessee, Frazier of North Dakota, Wheeler of Montana, Norris of Nebraska, and Shipstead of Minnesota.

"Just another statement of a reactionary," asserted Frazier.

"Look at his record," snapped the present Senator La Follette of the allusion to his father.

"We have no record of Communists in the Department of Justice," a high official said. "It is no crime to be a Communist. There is nothing in the Federal statutes to prohibit it. Even if such a list were here—and it is not—it would not be made available to Shearer."

At his last appearance Shearer stormed toward the committee's bench when a Senator used the word "cowardly" in connection with his activities. Apparently expecting something of the sort again, a committee room crowded with spectators awaited his appearance yesterday. Some laughs were provided, but little action.

The story of the death threat was contained in reports of a 4-year-old investigation of Shearer's activities at the Geneva Arms Conference. Yesterday he contended evidence at the older hearing raised a question as to the authenticity of the story.

"I charge the Department of Justice with trying to frame me," he declared, insisting the letter was put in over protest of its purported author.

"I would not threaten to kill anybody who owed me money," he re-

Prevailing Pay Beaten, Senate's Compromise Speeds Works Passage

SEC Moves to Control Sales In 26-Billion Counter Business

Kennedy Plan Refuses Licensing of All Broker Markets.

The first step in its long contemplated move to extend its authority over hundreds of dealers in the over-the-counter securities business was taken by the Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday.

Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman, announced the commission had sent drafts of proposed regulations to more than 1,000 brokers, dealers, State security commissioners and associations asking their advice and suggestions for permanent regulations.

Stressing the tentative nature of the program, the chairman pointed out that the commission's action was in accordance with the custom of inviting the preliminary consideration of persons to be affected.

"The suggestions * * * do not represent in any respect the final action of the commission," he said.

The plan would require registration with the commission of all those who make up the over-the-counter markets, heretofore the least regulated in the securities system. These markets, small and often consisting only of a broker's office, have been portrayed as doing an aggregate business of around $26,000,000,000 anually.

Dealers and brokers who deal in securities through recognized exchanges are under the control of the commission through its regulation of the exchanges themselves, but there has been no such control over those who sell securities directly to investors without going through exchanges.

Under the tentative program announced yesterday dealers in the

Howe Seriously Ill At the White House

Louis McHenry Howe, the President's chief secretary and political mentor, lies seriously ill at the White House—the victim of a series of complications which have kept him comparatively inactive since he helped engineer the New Deal into office.

A slight improvement was noted yesterday, and Mr. Howe was able to sit up a while and read the newspapers. Dr. Ross T. McIntire, White House physician, diagnosed the illness as a recurrence of an old bronchial ailment, with cardiac weakness.

Mr. Howe became ill shortly after he accompanied the President to Cambridge, Mass., last month.

Willkie Firm 'Diluted' Stock, Cries Rayburn

Texan Cites Testimony by Magnate; A.T. & T. Probe Is Authorized.

Opposition to holding company elimination voiced by Wendell Willkie, of the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, drew a withering reply yesterday from Representative Sam Rayburn (Democrat), of Texas.

The acid-tongued Texan, chairman of the House Commerce Committee, before which on Thursday Willkie assailed the New Deal fight on big utilities, countered with the charge that Willkie's own company once sold "watered" stock.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt signed the resolution authorizing expenditure of $750,000 on an investigation of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. by the Federal Communications Commission.

Pushed through Congress last week, the measure empowers the commission to inquire into the operation of all interstate communications firms. The investigators were required to submit special reports to Congress.

Charges Stock Was Watered.

Rayburn cited testimony by Willkie that his company "wrote up" its securities by nearly $500,000 in 1929.

"I wonder," he demanded, "whether Mr. Willkie, who now conceives it to be his duty as a trustee for his security holders to protest against this bill, though at that time of protesting against the disposition of that portion of the common stock which went to the public at watered prices?"

The Southerner argued that the only way to "handle" the holding companies is through ultimate elimination and ridiculed as "lip service" what he characterized as "the supposed eagerness" of the firms to accept Federal regulation.

"Great demands upon human management and judgment made by such a vast empire as Commonwealth & Southern," Rayburn added, "and the difficulties of reconcil-

New Deal Hails Two Victories In NRA Tests

Court Rulings End Series of Administration Setbacks.

In the face of a deluge of unfavorable decisions on NRA legislation, the Administration yesterday hailed two court actions favorable to the New Deal.

One was the indictment on five counts by a Federal grand jury in New Orleans of a brewery charged with violation of the code. The other was the recent decision by Judge Merrill E. Otis in Missouri sustaining the constitutionality of NRA as it affects the brewery code. Otis is the same judge who this week upheld the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium act.

Joseph H. Choate, jr., director of the Federal Alcohol Control Administration, sent a memorandum to President Roosevelt calling attention to the two cases. The President asked Choate to make his comments public. With 400 cases pending in court and with numerous decisions, nearly all adverse, already handed down, this is the only official comment that has been made.

Darrow to Testify.

Meanwhile, the Senate Finance Committee continued its investigation of NRA. It announced that the next witness, to appear Monday, would be Clarence Darrow, who nearly a year ago conducted an NRA investigation and concluded that the Recovery Administration was oppressing small business.

The 77-year-old criminal lawyer telegraphed the committee that he would be able to appear. He is expected to add color to a drab hearing, adding his cautic comments to criticisms already made by most of the members of the committee. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, former NRA administrator, told the committee he was willing to appear. No date for his appearance has been set.

Meanwhile, the committee continued to hear the testimony of S. Clay Williams, retiring head of the National Industrial Recovery Board

U. S. to Enlist 25,000 Veterans Here for 'Derelict Camp' Test

By the United Press.

Key West, Fla., March 15.—Florida has been selected for a sociological experiment for reconditioning derelict World War veterans, Julius F. Stone, jr., State FERA administrator, announced tonight.

Stone, who returned tonight from Washington, where he conferred with Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, said 25,000 war veterans will be sent to camps on the Florida keys for "reconditioning."

Former service men will be recruited by the Veterans' Bureau in Washington and sent to camps at Clearwater and Jacksonville before being assigned to quarters on the keys, he added.

The men will be removed from temptations of the city, Stone said, and will be used in construction work, but the construction projects are secondary.

"Restoring the men to their former selves is paramount," he explained.

Veterans to be sent to the "unique experiment" will be recruited as fast as they arrive in Washington, according to the State FERA official.

The camps will be built in Florida, Stone said, because the climate here offers them outdoor life the year-round.

The remoteness and inaccessibility of the Florida keys was another outstanding reason for Hopkins' decision to quarter the veterans in southern Florida, he explained.

Camps will be divided into two advisory subheads—a camp division and a work division.

Action on the Bill Likely Next Week

Switch of Six Senators Gives Victory to New Deal.

By Robert C. Albright.

The McCarran prevailing wage amendment went down to defeat in the Senate last night, breaking the log jam which has held up the President's $4,880,000,000 work relief bill and virtually the entire Administration legislative program.

The vote was 50 to 38. It was a belated triumph for President Roosevelt, who had bluntly threatened a veto if the amendment was adopted. Victory was clinched on a compromise amendment after a switch of six votes from the original prevailing wage majority had divided the labor opposition.

The compromise was offered by Senator Richard B. Russell, jr. (Democrat), of Georgia, with the President's approval. It was accepted by the overwhelming vote of 83 to 2. Only Senators Frederick Hale, of Maine, and Jesse H. Metcalf, of Rhode Island, Old Guard Republicans, voted against it.

Voting against the McCarran amendment were 44 Democrats, 5 Republicans and 1 Progressive, while 19 Democrats joined with 18 Republicans and 1 Farmer-Laborite for the amendment.

Terms of Compromise.

Approval of the Russell amendment assures payment of prevailing wages on all permanent public building projects, reinforcing the present Bacon-Davis law. Elsewhere the President may fix the wages he chooses, if in his opinion they will not operate to tear down the wage scale.

On the other hand, the defeated McCarran amendment would have made mandatory the payment of wages prevailing in every community on Federal air projects, a requirement the Administration insisted would add at least $1,500,000,000 to the cost of the program.

Senator Pat McCarran, Nevada's "fighting Irishman," who, with the aid of Huey P. Long, handed the Administration a licking on the same amendment three weeks ago, went down with his gloves on. He knew he was whipped after Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York, and Senator Robert M. La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, led a bolt to the compromise.

"In God's name," he shouted at colleagues before the vote, "isn't there a manhood here?

"Whom do we represent? Do we represent the Executive? If we do, then I think it's about time to reform our organic law."

Green "Disappointed."

In a statement, President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, called defeat of the McCarran amendment a "keen disappointment to labor," serving notice that the A. F. of L. will continue its fight to "maintain wages."

"Labor does not accept the Russell amendment as an improvement over the measure originally reported by the Senate Appropriations Committee," he said. "It can not and does not accept the Russell amendment."

Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson, who has struggled for a fortnight to turn the tide of Senate revolt, was jubilant over the outcome. Canceling the Senate's usual Saturday holiday, he called the chamber back into session today, in a drive to follow up swiftly his advantage and complete the bill.

Passage early next week is in prospect, despite several major hurdles that must be cleared. Foremost of these is a strong conservative movement to cut the total of the bill to $1,880,000,000.

Leaders last night were seeking a sharp limitation of debate that would confine members to 30 min-

New Deal Hails Two Victories On NRA Tests

Williams told the committee that it must be ready to destroy the inefficient minority in business if it determines to protect labor on wages and hours of work. While Williams was defending the NRA, his statement was seized upon immediately by its critics as bearing out their contention that the relief administration is crushing small business.

While Williams was testifying before the Finance Committee, Lloyd K. Garrison, former chairman of the Labor Relations Board, was telling another committee that Section 7(a) of the NIRA could be enforced in "only a handful of cases."

Prof. Garrison, who recently quit the Labor Board to resume his duties as dean of the Law School of Wisconsin University, told the committee that "it is worse to have a law holding out false hopes than to have no law at all."

Garrison appeared in behalf of the Wagner labor relations bill and indicated he believed that if this bill is not passed Section 7(a) should not be retained in the NRA act.

Senatorial critics of the NRA, led by Senator Borah, have been contending that the Recovery Administration has abrogated the anti-trust laws. Williams told the Senate committee that codes could not be extended without some relaxation of the antitrust laws. Coming, as it did, in a statement defending the NRA, this was hailed by opponents of the measure as bearing out their contentions.

Decision up to Congress.

Williams told the committee that Congress must weigh the social advantages to the community at large against the desires of a minority in business. He said that this minority was not necessarily composed of small businesses, but added that the small businesses were most likely to be inefficient.

"You have demonstrated that in the tobacco business," remarked Senator King (Democrat), Utah.

"On one side of the question," Williams said later, "is whether you are going to maintain hours and wages for the social advantages involved.

"What's at stake on the other side? Whether a man will be put out of business because he can not pay the minimum wage.

"There is where Congress must decide which of the two things you are going to do."

Meanwhile, it was reported that two proposed NRA bills have been secretly drawn, one providing for the continuance of the present organization with little change, and the other making drastic changes. It is reported that the second measure contains virtually the provisions of the Black 30-hour bill.

The first court case hailed by the President and the Alcohol Administration was the indictment of the Jackson Brewing Co., of New Orleans on five counts, charging shipping high-test beer into a State where only 3.2 beer is allowed, and for selling beer to wholesalers who did not have proper Government permits.

Court Decisions.

The Missouri decision enjoined the M. K. Goetz Brewing Co. from furnishing fixtures to retail beer establishments and requiring these establishments to sell only its products.

This case directly involved constitutionality of the NIRA under which the Alcohol Administration operates.

Between You and Me

The Spending of the Billions; Taxpayers Dutifully Pay; Miss Ada's Half Hour.

By Raymond Clapper

IT might be a healthy thing if Congress took the trouble to find out exactly how the Government is spending the billions which are being poured out.

But without waiting to do that it rushes $4,000,000,000 more for public works, considers setting up a vast organization to handle social insurance, to regulate public utilities, to regulate every form of interstate commerce, to extend NRA, to give HOLC nearly $2,000,000,000 more borrowing power, to extend AAA's control, to nationalize coal mines, to enlarge regulation of foods and drugs, in short to expand in every direction the functions and authority of the Federal Government.

* * * *

The thing which Congress does not consider is whether the Government has enough common sense and administration technique to handle these vast responsibilities. Theoretically they may be highly desirable. But if these vast powers are handed over to be promptly wrapped up in red tape, what is gained?

Taxpayers have dutifully filed their income returns and scraped together cash contributions to pay interest on Government borrowings for such operations as the one just disclosed in NRA records. The matter was mentioned here briefly yesterday. Now the full records of the case are available. They are a sample of what happens when a Government bureau gets going under a full head of steam.

It is the NRA case arising out of the fact that Miss Ada Erler, employed by the "Bee Hive," operated by J. A. Ochs & Son, Inc., at New Ulm, Minn., wanted an extra half-hour for lunch.

* * * *

Miss Ada, employed for 20 years by the "Bee Hive," had stomach trouble, and her physician advised rest after meals. Her kindly employer, who was conscientiously operating under the retail code, undertook to extend her lunch period to an hour and a half until she had recovered.

On November 16, 1934, he wrote to NRA petitioning an exemption to this effect and inclosing a physician's certificate that Miss Ada needed the additional rest.

Copies of this petition, together with the physician's report, were sent to all of the NRA advisory boards and to the National Retail Code Authority, in order to obtain their recommendations.

The managing director of the National Retail Code Authority in due course reported back to NRA as follows: "In view of the unusual and obviously deserving nature of this case which is attested to by a physician, I recommend that the petition be approved."

David M. Polak, of the NRA division of research and planning, reported: "The approval of this petition is not contrary to the policy of national industrial recovery act."

Gullie B. Goldin, assistant counsel of NRA's legal division, reported: "The legal division approves subject to the following:

"1. Line 2 of proposed order, add 'New Ulm, Minn.'

"2. Lines 5, 20 and 24—change words 'applicants,' 'they,' 'petitioners,' etc., to the singular."

Ernest L.Osborne, of the NRA Consumers Advisory Board, reported: "We have your memorandum of December 5 upon the above subject and since the question involved is one of hours and no substantial consumer interests appear to be involved, we make no comments thereon at this time."

W. L. Walger, of NRA's Industrial Advisory Board, marked his copy of the order "approved."

A. S. Donaldson, acting deputy administrator, reported: "I am of the opinion that the petition has shown undue and unusual hardship as defined in Article X, Section 6, and warrants approval."

Armed with these recommendations, the final order was issued. After several whereases outlining the facts in the case, the order continued:

"Whereas, the deputy administrator has reported and it appears to the satisfaction of the National Industrial Recovery Board, that the exemption hereinafter granted is necessary and will tend to effectuate the policies of Title I of the National Industrial Recovery act;

"Now, therefore, pursuant to authority vested in it, it is hereby ordered that the above named applicant be and it hereby is exempted, as of the date of this order from said provisions of said code to the extent hereinafter stated:

"The petitioner is hereby permitted to extend the lunch hour of Miss Ada Erler from one hour to one hour and a half until such time as the physical disabilities complained of have been alleviated. This exemption is subject to cancellation by the National Industrial Recovery Board or its agent, with or without hearing."

This order was signed by Harry C. Carr, acting division administrator, and countersigned by A. S. Donaldson, acting deputy administrator, dated January 4. It took seven weeks.

And that is how Miss Ada got an extra half-hour for lunch.

ing its power with a democratic scheme of things did not seem to affect Mr. Willkie's self-confidence as to the divinity of the holding company's mission.

"Never Impressed by Idea."

"Mr. Willkie has apparently never been impressed by the President's idea that a free people can not tolerate great concentrations of economic power in their midst.

"I could not help thinking of his own autocratic power in 11 States as on the one hand I heard him assert that he believed in some kind of vague regulations for holding companies and on the other hand show what seemed to me a poorly concealed contempt and uncooperative attitude toward the very Federal regulation he proposed."

The committee heard Preston S. Arkwright, Georgia Power Co. president, protest the banning of the holding companies in five years is legislation of a type which President Roosevelt once condemned.

Quotes Roosevelt Speech.

Arkwright quoted Mr. Roosevelt as saying in March, 1930, when he was Governor of New York, that:

"To bring about government by oligarchy masquerading as democracy, it is fundamentally essential that practically all authority and control be centralized in our National Government.

"The individual sovereignty of our States must first be destroyed, except in mere minor matters of legislation. We are safe from the danger of any such departure from the principles on which this country was founded just so long as the individual home rule of the States is scrupulously preserved and fought for."

The witness declared:

"This legislation is many times worse. It breaks down the authority of the States, and it construes the interstate commerce clause of the Constitution so broadly that, if the theory behind this bill should prevail, there is no business of any kind anywhere which could not be brought under Federal regulation, control and management."

Utility Bill Is Backed.

Cumberland, Md., March 15 (AP).—While their workers continued to canvass the city and vicinity to get signers to petitions, the Allegany Trades Council, representing 34 unions here, adopted resolutions supporting the bill before the General Assembly for a referendum on the municipal light plant here and urging legislators to pass the measure.

utes on each amendment. They were frustrated by Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, leader of an inflationist effort to tack a mandatory silver monetization "rider" to the bill. Thomas may renew his silver campaign in the Senate today. He demanded at least two hours to present his case, and silverite colleagues will want to be heard.

Contending there is little essential difference between the McCarran amendment and the Russell compromise, Senator Wagner sounded the keynote for the half-dozen Senators who deserted the McCarran forces. To hold out for the McCarran amendment, he argued, would defeat the President's program and profit labor nothing.

He stuck to this view and cast a "no" ballot on the prevailing wage amendment, despite a gunfire of criticism from labor-minded colleagues, who throughout the day assailed his stand.

Long Taunts Wagner.

Besides Wagner and La Follette, Senators who switched were O'Mahoney, Wyoming; Black, Alabama (Democrats); Austin and Gibson, Vermont (Republicans).

Huey Long, whose daily harangues and threatened filibusters in behalf of the prevailing wage scale have contributed to the Senate delay,, contented himself with flinging a few taunts at Senator Wagner.

He recounted the Biblical story of Moses and the Promised Land, and the "lures and pitfalls" that decimated the Israelites on their way.

"The hand of the tempter is strong," he drawled, "and the flesh is weak. There were only two left when Moses reached the Promised Land. At least we will equal his record. The Senator from Nevada and myself will vote for his amendment."

Defeat was so imminent that Huey abandoned earlier efforts to find a "pair" for the absentee vote of Mrs. Hattie W. Caraway, of Arkansas, now ill. It was Mrs. Caraway's "pair," manipulated on the floor by Long and Senator L. J. Dickinson (Republican), Iowa, which provided the one-vote winning margin three weeks ago for the McCarran amendment. Mrs. Caraway's was unrecorded and unpaired yesterday.

If there ever was a prevailing alliance between Long and McCarran, however, it was shattered when Louisiana's "Kingfish" attempted to filibuster the works bill. McCarran disowned the effort and called for a speedy vote. Concluding his appeal for the amendment, the Nevadan yesterday brusquely refused to yield to Huey. He finally permitted a question from Long, but disdained to answer it.

Debating under 20-minute speech limitations, Senator after Senator took the floor, until, all but his own 20 minutes exhausted, Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia, arose.

Known to be in favor of reducing the $4,880,000,000 appropriation, Glass has battled diligently against the McCarran amendment, using the President's own argument that it would increase the cost of his program.

Warns of a Veto.

Solemnly, he warned the Senate the President would veto the entire works bill if the amendment passed, and defended the consistency of the President's stand. On the word of Majority Leader Robinson, Glass said, the Russell "compromise" was "acceptable."

Floor attendance was at record strength all day, and galleries were packed, as the long-disputed issue neared a ballot. Debate reached a dramatic pitch when short, ravenhaired Senator La Follette, breaking with his Progressive colleagues, frankly told the Senate he was going to vote against the McCarran amendment. He said that was the only practicable course to take, to save the President's relief program from destruction.

There was tension in the atmosphere as he charged that a number of Senators had supported the McCarran amendment, knowing the President would veto the measure, and hoping that would kill the bill.

McCarran was on his feet at once, asking him to name names.

La Follette retorted that McCarran himself had voted for a slash in the appropriation, in committee.

"Yes, and I'll do it again," replied the Nevadan.

La Follette is behind a movement to increase the program to $10,000,000,000. His amendment, together with silver, greenback and bonus "riders," still must be passed on before the completed bill comes up for passage. Robinson thinks all can be disposed of with dispatch.

torted, and again a packed roomful of spectators chuckled. Members of the committee did not even smile.

Committee members, already virtually smothered under his stories of widespread pro-armament activities, closed the session yesterday without asking him to designate the nine present or former Senators he said had Communist affiliations.

Others on List.

Others on the list of 14 were the late Senator Kendrick, of Wyoming; the late Senator Howell, of Nebraska; the late Senator Ralston, of Indiana; former Senator Dill, of Washington; former Senator Brookhart, of Iowa, and former Senator Johnson, of Minnesota.

The letter dated March 27, 1929, was sent by Shearer to Homer L. Ferguson, president of the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. It asked compensation for Shearer's services to the "Big Three" shipbuilding companies for activites at the Geneva conference and elsewhere, and said:

"Twelve Senators (the correct number was later discovered to be 14) only opposed the bill, of which nine are recorded in the Department of Justice records with past affiliations with the Communist Party."

Questioned by Bone.

"Who are these Senators?" demanded Senator Bone (Democrat), Washington, and then with some show of scorn added: "I'd like to know who some of my companions are."

Shearer leaned back in his chair and pointed to a book entitled "Reds in America," published in 1924 under editorial supervision of R. M. Whitney, director of the Washington Bureau of the National Defense Society.

Under the names of the 14 Senators listed was the notation that they were "indorsed by the conference for progressive political action," which Senator Bone described as containing heads of major labor organizations, including William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and executives of several railroad brotherhoods.

morrow on whether to proceed to his goal, airport officials said.

Maj. Berry said Post had averaged approximately 340 miles an hour on the final two hours of his flight.

Post took off from Los Angeles at 9:16 a. m. (Eastern standard time) and pointed his globe-circling plane toward New York.

He declared he would fly between 32,500 and 40,000 feet (6 to 7½ miles) above the earth's surface.

He said his attempt was not to be a speed flight primarily, but rather an effort to demonstrate the practicability of passenger air travel through the stratosphere.

The aviator's recent attempt to span the continent in less than eight hours in the upper regions of the sky ended on a Western desert.

Subsequent investigation by Post caused him to issue a statement that "someone" had placed a foreign substance—steel filings or emery dust—in the engine of his plane.

Col. Roscoe Turner holds the present transcontinental speed record of 10 hours 2 minutes, established in September, 1934.

Undiscouraged, Sponsor To Continue Efforts

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 15.—Wiley Post's forced landing in Cleveland is "no discouragement," Frank Phillips, Bartlesville (Okla.) oil magnate and sponsor of the flight, said tonight, adding, "We will continue our efforts to perfect stratosphere flights."

Phillips had waited through the afternoon at Floyd Bennett Field, Brooklyn, Post's intended landing place.

"I am very happy that Wiley is safe," Phillips said.

Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, war ace and commercial aviation executive, also had been at the Brooklyn Airport since early afternoon.

"It was a tough break," was his comment, "but the progress is proof of the tremendous possibilities of stratosphere flights."

Smith pleaded self-defense, declaring that he "was in no physical condition to fight old man Cook and I believe that he would have killed me if I had not shot him." Defense attorneys placed witnesses on the stand who declared that Cook was "dangerous" and had a quarrelsome disposition.

Tired of First Wife, Says Abercrombie

Ex-Business Leader Got Mexican Divorce.

By the Associated Press.

Ardmore, Pa., March 15.—George A. Abercrombie, former executive of two big companies whose mysterious disappearance six years ago was solved when he was found cooking dinners for his second wife, faced a hearing today on charges of desertion and nonsupport.

The former president of the Franklin Wear Co., and former vice president of the Fuller Brush Co., was arrested Wednesday as he and his second wife, the former Grace Holbrich Lynde, of Melrose, Mass., were in the midst of dinner preparations.

The warrant, sworn out by his first wife, Mrs. Mary Abercrombie, charged him with abandoning her and leaving her in difficult financial circumstances.

As the first wife was reported ready to fly here today to attend the hearing, Abercrombie denied he had ever "deserted" his wife.

"I just got tired and left," he said.

Police said he disappeared from Melrose after withdrawing $100,000 from a bank. They said he is now a statistician employed by a Philadelphia brush company. Abercrombie said the second marriage took place after he obtained a Mexican divorce from his first wife. The second wife was not taken into custody.

Cristeros Plan Overthrow of Government In Heart of Mexico City, Williams Writes

Mounted police charge Catholic rioters in Mexico City in one of the numerous demonstrations against closing of churches, exiling of priests and enforcement of socialistic and sex education.

The Post herewith presents the second of a series of articles giving the viewpoint of a Catholic layman on the religious strife in Mexico. The observations of the writer do not imply editorial indorsement of his views. The articles are written by Frederick Vincent Williams, an American journalist, now a director of the Catholic Laymen's Retreat Association in California and its former secretary. He is also director of public relations for various prelates and religious orders. Mr. Williams went to Mexico to meet and talk with proscribed prelates and priests who are in hiding there, and brought back letters from them to their coreligionists in the United States. His viewpoint is frankly partisan, but is the first direct recital of the case presented by the "Cristeros" of Mexico.

Immediately following the conclusion of this series, The Post will begin publication of a series of articles written by Dr. Luis Quintanilla, of the Mexican Foreign Service, in reply to Mr. Williams' articles and representing the official attitude of Mexico on the questions under discussion.

Entire Country Armed Camp, Troops Fill Capital, He Says.

By Frederick Vincent Williams.

I am told that 5,000 men in the Federal district of Mexico City alone have been killed since the truce between Calles and the church in 1929. Promised peace, the Cristeros had laid down their arms. Then they were hunted down and killed. In addition to the killings in Mexico City, thousands more met death in other states. The killings are still going on.

Mexico is an armed camp. Soldiers are everywhere. Every city and pueblo has its garrisons. Mexico City, the capital, a beautiful city, with boulevards, parks, office buildings, shopping districts, mansions, etc., a Paris set in the loveliest garden in America, with a population of 1,500,000 persons, bristles with the bayonets of soldiery and of police.

In the heart of the city and in its suburbs you see them quartered, always ready. On the highways leading out of the city machine gun nests and batteries guard approaches through canyons and valleys on both sides.

Families of Officers Still Reported Catholics.

In the very heart of Mexico City the Cristeros, after seven years, are meeting, to plan the overthrow of the anti-Christian government.

The army is well clothed, well armed, well drilled. The police are likewise well equipped and armed. Much will depend, so far as the length of the struggle is concerned, on the loyalty of the army and the police. To hold a position in either body, officers and men must renounce their allegiance to the Catholic Church, in which for the most part they were born. They must also record whether or not their wives practice the Catholic religion and whether or not their children are taking part in religious devotions or training of any kind. All of them, to hold their places, have replied in the negative. The questionnaire compels them to name the date on which they stopped religious practices.

Now it is known—if not something of a scandal in military circles—that the wives of many of the officers have shrines to saints in their homes and secretly are bringing up their children as Catholics. How much influence have these wives and children on the husbands and fathers who will be called on to shoot down the Cristeros, who are in reality Catholic laymen under arms against the Commune?

The army and the police are supplemented by dorps of spies. These spies are everywhere. The spies are in churches, in offices, on streets, in crowds, and are paid a bonus per head for every man they catch.

In Mexico City I dined in many homes. At dinner the conversation would suddenly cease, while one of the family went to the door or window and peered out to see who was calling. No one knew at what hour the secret police might arrive. Hundreds have been taken away in the past few years never to reappear. In the majority of such cases not even an official record can be found of an arrest. I met men of affairs in Mexico City, doctors, lawyers, business men, who lived in constant apprehension lest they be arrested at any night in their homes. I met men who were afraid to spend the night in their own homes.

Crucifixes Still Seen In Homes of Mexicans.

Reports of warrants for arrest—if there are to be warrants—fly quickly. The espionage of the government has come to be almost matched by that of the Catholics. A signal is given. The head of a family kisses his wife and children goodby, bids his guests a hasty farewell and is gone into hiding.

Many of these men have taken no part in plans to overthrow the government. They are merely known to be opposed to the tenets of Communism.

The Indian and the peon may go to church, if one remains, and kneel and pray. The so-called white collar man, the middle class man who might be a leader, may not.

Because of this, in every home I visited I found crosses and pictures of the Virgin of Guadalupe and the Saints. In some of these homes, the crucifixes were hung boldly on the wall, but in most of them they were hidden.

The penalty for a priest who has returned from exile and celebrates mass in a home is death. He may not be publicly shot, but he disappears. Long jail sentences are meted out to male members of families in which priests have been found celebrating mass. The homes are confiscated by the government. Yet, I found families begging priests to spend a night in their homes and offer mass.

The priests travel about Mexico in disguise. They are no longer permitted to wear the Roman collar or their clerical garb—even those who are licensed.

Archbishop in Exile In San Antonio.

There are 14 states in Mexico where not a single priest is allowed to minister to the spiritual needs of the people. There are three states in which only two priests are authorized to care for populations of 132,900 to 493,530 Catholics. Only 333 priests are permitted by the Mexican law of today to minister to a Catholic population of 15,012,573. In the states of Nuevo Leon, Michoacan and others the local Socialist or Communist authorities by canceling licenses issued to priests, expelling them from their parishes and refusing to issue licenses to fill vacancies, have reduced the number of priests actually officiating in the state to a number less than that authorized by law.

These figures are from the official findings of The Most Rev. Leopoldo Ruiz y Flores, Archbishop of Morelos and Apostolic Delegate to Mexico. He is in exile at the College of the Incarnate Word in San Antonio, Tex. He is an elderly, kindly little man, without bitterness. On his desk is a photograph of Gen. Plutarco Calles, who began the persecution of the church in 1926. Pointing to it he said:

"I keep that picture there and every time I look at it I utter a prayer that Calles may be forgiven the persecution and the slaying and the imprisonment of my children." Upward of 300 priests have laid down their lives since the war began on religion by Reds in Mexico in 1926.

Archbishop Diaz in Mexico City is primate of the Church in Mexico now that the Apostolic Delegate is an exile. With a handful of priests he holds the old Cathedral in Mexico City. He told me that 67 churches in his archdiocese were seized by the government in a single day recently, that more were going.

"My heart bleeds for my children and their priests," he said. "I have 400 priests from my archdiocese who are on the verge of starvation. They have been driven from their parishes. The situation is worse than it was in 1929 when the Holy See allowed public worship to be renewed on the promises made by the Mexican government that while the antireligious laws were modified they would not be enforced in a sectarian mood.

"Since that time a large number of Catholic Churches have been seized by the government—more than 150 in the last year. The number of priests allowed to officiate has been reduced, and many have been sent to jail and fined. Catholic schools, even those clearly permitted by law, have been closed and their property and buildings confiscated.

"Mexico City has been deprived of churches, among them being some that have been declared by the government itself archaeological, historic or artistic monuments—Santa Teresa, La Encarnacion, Santa Cataline de Sena, Santa Brigida, Santa Clara, Jesus Maria, San Diego, being among our most beautiful and our oldest churches.

"Bishops are driven from their diocese, priests are suffering tremendous hardships, churches, rectories, seminaries are closed and confiscated."

French Army Service Increased for Defense

By the Associated Press.

Paris, (Saturday) March 16.—Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin won three votes of confidence in the Chamber of Deputies early today on his demand that army service must be increased as a defense against a heavily rearmed Germany.

The government was given a free hand to increase military service by decree from one year to two years.

After the first vote of confidence Flandin said: "The world will know the country has discovered the France of 1914, the France of Verdun."

The votes approved the premier's denunciation of Germany's "vast rearmament" and France's refusal to approve the establishment of military aviation in the Reich.

The first vote was 389 to 190 in support of the government, which refused to accept a Socialist motion to have the question of two-year conscript service submitted to the nation at large. The Socialist attempt was in line with their campaign to force new elections.

The new measure is intended temporarily to keep the army at its present size during the lean years of "war baby" classes, the premier asserted.

Leon Blum, leader of the Socialist opposition, asked whether it were not part of "great Napoleonic plans of attack being prepared as in 1913 and 1914?"

Premier Flandin's victory was assured when the Radical Socialists who have opposed the two-year term voted in caucus to support the government.

Previously Edouard Herriot, their leader, had threatened to resign as minister without portfolio unless the parliamentary group agreed to suport the premier's program.

Lenthening of the service term from one to two years and lowering of the conscript age from 21 years to 20 was proposed in the government's bill introduced in the Chamber of Deputies.

"France, like Britain, refused to consent to Germany's increase in her forces by unilateral decision," the premier said, his reference apparently to Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering's recent announcement at Berlin that Germany henceforth will have an "official" military air force.

"When the forces of the German army are considerably increased by a unilateral decision to which the French government does not acquiesce any more than the British government," the premier continued, "France can not without endangering her national defense permit her army's forces to become inferior to those provided for when German rearmaments were officially within the limits fixed by the peace treaty."

latter class, if their dealings are through the mails or otherwise in interstate commerce, must be registered. In case of violation of the standards fixed by the commission they could be deprived of their registration.

One standard set up was that the commission could deny registration to a broker or dealer who had been convicted of a crime within ten years. Others would revoke registrations of dealers who took "groosly unfair advantage of a customer" or "engaged in conduct otherwise inconsistent with just and equitable principles of trade in any security transactions."

Hope for Peace Fades In Maritime Walkout

Seattle, March 15 (AP).—Hopes for an early settlement of the maritime labor disputes here faded today when members of the Masters, Mates and Pilots Association, which walked out in sympathy with other members of the transpacific liner President Jefferson's crew, declared a strike of their own.

They demanded the discharge of the vessel's first officer and his assistants. Pickets stopped trucks bearing freight to the liner, which was slated to sail for the Orient tomorrow.

Ready to Handle Bonus Marchers

By the United Press.

Federal Emergency Relief Administration officials last night said they had no plans at present for caring for 25,000 World War veterans in Florida "reconditioning" camps.

They said that 1,900 veterans were in camps in Florida and South Carolina at present and that facilities would have to be expanded to care for additional men.

Observers believed that final plans had not been made for expanding the Southern camps, but that it was held as a measure to be used if any large amount of former soldiers congregated in Washington during the coming discussion of the bonus issue.

The House is expected to take up the issue next week and it was believed that officials were preparing for an emergency in case the veterans began descending on the Capital as they did in 1932.

Blanton Admits 'Deal' to Replace Police Inspector Bean

stayed, how a colleague and brother Congressman should be treated. He cited rules to show them he was a privileged person who should not be interrupted or questioned and insisted the committee violate its rules and permit Maj. Brown, Inspector Headley and Mrs. Louise K. Marx, his secretary, to stay in the room, in violation of the committee rule.

He won his point during the morning session. Shortly after the afternoon session began, however, he lost his morning advantage and suffered defeat in the face of the threat that he would leave the committee room if Maj. Brown and Inspector Headley were excluded.

"This committee," Representative Schulte said, addressing Chairman Randolph, "has rules. I insist that we observe those rules. They provide that no other witness may be in the room while a witness is testifying."

"Is there a motion?" asked Randolph.

"Yes," barked Schulte, "I make the motion."

"I second the motion," said Representative Reed.

"If these gentlemen are not permitted to be present when I make my statement Ill leave the room," warned Blanton. Obviously he expected that warning to be adequate. It was not. The motion was carried. Maj. Brown, very red in the face, and Inspector Headley, snappily erect of carriage as if he were on dress parade, took up their coats and hats and left the room.

"Well," said Blanton, "all right. If you don't want these gentlemen in the room——" and resumed his statement and parrying of questions.

Maj. Brown and Inspector Headley are to be heard by the committee when it reconvenes in hearings at 10:30 a. m. Monday.

"Just Another Witness."

The hearing was a constant series of squabbles. It was the first time in a number of years any other member of the House had dared to challenge the indefatigable and unforgiving Texan and he was in a constant turmoil. Wrangles arose whenever any committee member or John R. Fitzpatrick committee counsel, insisted Mr. Blanton give a direct answer to a question.

"You're just another witness to me," Mr. Fitzpatrick told Mr. Blanton.

"I'm a member of Congress——" cried Mr. Blanton.

"You're a member of Congress, yes, sir," agreed Representative Schulte, "but you're just another witness before this committee.

The passage of words was loud. Blanton, two members of the committee and Fitzpatrick were talking in raised voices at the same time. Earlier Representative Randolph had interrupted the proceedings when Blanton resented questions by Fitzpatrick, saying:

"What are you here for, spending the people's money to get back of crime in the District, or trying to get up some little trouble among Congressmen?"

Fitzpatrick Backed.

"I want to interrupt at this time," Randolph said, "to say that this committee has the highest confidence in its counsel and wants him held in that regard."

"How about the gentleman now speaking?" asked Blanton. "Have you the highest confidence in him?"

"Of course," Chairman Randolph answered, in the smooth voice which quieted wrangles through the day, "we have the highest confidence in a member of Congress."

"I object," said Schulte, "to the statement that the Congressman just made relative to our counsel here. We do have the highest regard for him."

"I do not want to be interrupted," said Blanton.

"Mr. Chairman," said Mr. Schulte, "if he is going to be a witness he is going to be one the same as other witnesses."

"I am going to be a member of Congress making a statement," said Blanton.

"You are just another witness here," said Fitzpatrick.

Stands on His "Rights."

"I," said Mr. Blanton, "am going to be a Congressman making a statement in my own right as a matter of personal privilege, Mr. Chairman, and if I am not given that right I do not intend to appear here as a witness."

"That is entirely up to you," responded Mr. Schulte.

"You are here just as another witness," said Fitzpatrick. By that time the committee counsel had lost his usual smile. The rose he always wears in the lapel of his coat was there, but the smile was gone and his face was red and his voice was raised.

"I can get my rights on the floor," warned Blanton.

"You certainly can," agreed Mr. Schulte, and again Chairman Randolph calmed down the fight by standing.

"I want to say," he said, "I wish the members of the committee and also the witness and those in the room will remember that this is a hearing which, personally, I want to see conducted with dignity."

"Whenever they treat me right," Mr. Chairman, I will treat them right," said Blanton.

Blanton Taken Unawares.

Later Representative Ralph O. Brewster, of Maine, interrupted proceedings to challenge the statements of Blanton that he was not getting just treatment from the committee. In what way? Brewster asked. Did Mr. Blanton want to make a statement which should be unquestioned? If Mr. Blanton agreed he would answer questions why should he get angry and protest when committee members and committee counsel demanded an answer to their questions.

A short time earlier Representative Brewster, who was not present at the beginning of the episode, had taken Blanton so completely unawares that the Texan sat silent for a moment.

"This gentlemen's agreement you speak of," said Brewster, and Blanton said "Yes."

"As I understand it the only man left out of the gentlemen's agreement was Inspector Bean the man who was to be forced to retire."

Blanton said he hadn't talked with Inspector Bean but had talked with friends of the inspector and they were agreeable to the arrangement whereby Inspector Bean was to be made assistant superintendent and was to be retired in a few months, so he could get the pension benefit of the increased pay.

"But Inspector Bean wasn't consulted?" Brewster pursued. Blanton said he had not been.

Representative Blanton appeared before the committee voluntarily. He said he wanted to reply to the charges of Inspector Bean, made the day before.

When the position of assistant superintendent of police became vacant last year he had indorsed Inspector Headley for the post, Blanton said. That, he said, was in the spring of 1934. Friends of Inspector Bean had asked him to let Inspector Bean have the place, Blanton said. He said if "that is all right with my friend Headley" he would agree to it.

"Now don't get the idea that it was my indorsement that controlled the appointment," he told the committee. "It was not, and I realized and everybody else realized it; it was just for what it was worth."

Tells of His "Methods."

"Do you think it had any bearing on it?" asked Fitzpatrick.

"Well, what do you think about it?" replied Blanton.

Q. Well, I am asking you.

A. Well, some of the people I have indorsed have been appointed and some I have indorsed have not. The Senate day before yesterday confirmed one of my old friends as postmaster at Stamford where there were 21 applicants fighting for the position—21 different prominent applicants, and they confirmed my friend.

Schulte. "In other words, your political activities and your power and prestige reach into the Senate?"

Blanton—Oh, no. But my Senators work with me and I work with them. There was a feeling that I should submit the matter and I sent for Inspector Headley, and I never saw a man in my life more gentlemanly. Some fellows would have said "no," but Inspector Headley said "Why, certainly, I will be very glad to do anything I can for Bean; he is my friend."

Fitzpatrick—Was it the understanding that Bean was to get it and then to get out and Headley was to get it?—A. It was the understanding that Bean was to get it and then Bean was to retire, so he could retire on higher pay; and then Headley would be appointed.

Q. As Bean's successor?—A. As Bean's successor. Inspector Headley said "Why, certainly. Bean and I have been friends and old-time police officers. If I could do him a kindness I would do it in a minute." He said "It is perfectly all right with me, so that he can retire on higher pay and have it for life. He deserves it." I never saw a man more magnanimous or more generous. So I withdrew my indorsement of Inspector Headley, who was my friend and whom I believed in implicitly, and I indorsed Inspector Bean, and he was appointed and I forgot about it.

Assails Bean's Charge.

Q. You thought Bean was a fine officer and you indorsed him?—A. I did not know much about him, only I took Headley's word for it and Maj. Brown's word for it. They praised him.

Q. You did not know anything against him, did you?—A. I did not at that time know a thing in the world against him. And I want to say this, that there never was a statement made that was more unjust to two good officers than the statement made here yesterday by Bean against Brown and Headley. They have been his close personal friends. They were responsible for his being appointed to this position. If it had not been for Maj. Brown and if it had not been for Headley he could not have been appointed, I believe; that is my honest judgment. * * * I forgot about it. When I get through with a thing I do not think of it any more. And that talk about a plot, that is all there was to the situation.

Along in the fall—I am a man who when I start anything, I keep it up; I do not forget it and let it be pigeonholed.

Made "Gentleman's Agreement."

From my own home in Abilene, Tex., Aug. 4, 1934. I wrote this letter. I wish you would take it down, Mr. Reporter, because I want to keep the copy. (Reading):

"My dear Maj. Brown—You will remember the gentleman's agreement we had that the assistant superintendent only wanted to hold the office a short time and would then retire, and that you would then give the place to Inspector Albert J. Headley. I am counting on you to carry out this agreement, and would appreciate your advising me just how soon this change will be effected. Very sincerely yours,

"THOMAS L. BLANTON."

I was assured he would be retired before cold weather came.

Q. You said Officer Bean was a good officer. You had never heard anything about him. Why were you so interested in having him retired?—A. Merely to do justice to a man who had gotten out of his way to let the way open to get the extra higher retirement pay. * * * If the friends of Inspector Headley had not gotten out of the way I do not believe Inspector Bean ever would have been appointed. But Inspector Headley magnanimously got out of his way.

Q. But it was with the understanding that Headley was to succeed Bean?—A. Exactly.

Brown's Part Pressed.

After Maj. Brown's reply to Blanton had been read, Fitzpatrick asked:

Q. Why is he telling you all of this?—A. Because he had a gentlemen's agreement with me. Do you keep a gentlemen's agreement, when you have one?

Q. Why should Maj. Brown have a gentleman's agreement with you about somebody being retired?—A. Suppose I had indorsed you for the position——

Q. Schulte—Is your indorsement necessary for an officer's promotion? That is the thing we bring up.—A. No. It is no more necessary than yourself.

Q. Fitzpatrick—You really dictated this appointment, did you not?—A. No, other friends that were with me and myself; a host of friends of Maj. Headley.

From that day until I came to Washington, I never had anything more to say to anybody about Bean or Headley or Brown.

I spent the entire month of December here holding hearings on the District Appropriation bill, working and getting up data. Not a word was said by anybody about any of this matter; I never had it in mind.

Q. It had all been set out, had it not?—A. What?

Q. It had all been s et out, had it not, sir, according to these records — these letters?—A. All been set out?

Q. Yes, had it not all been agreed upon? — A. Just a gentleman's agreement between friends—just a gentleman's agreement between friends, who had no control of the situation at all. Do you think any man in Congress can control such a situation as this? This man Bean's position is not a position fixed by Congressmen.

Q. You tried to control it?—A. Oh, hell, no. You know that is all bunk.

Q. What did you try to do with these letters?—A. What are you here for, spending the people's money to get back of crime in the District, or trying to get up some little trouble among Congressmen?

Schulte — you made a statement this morning relative to Inspector Headley that he was ver, efficient and a wonderful police officer and probably I am not quoting verbatim, but the inference was that he was one of the outstanding characters on the police force, isn't that right——

Blanton—Yes, sir; he served about 39 years.

Q. The thing I am bringing out—A. Just a minute—the investigation I made of Inspector Headley showed that none of his superior officers has ever made a complaint about him in 39 years.

A. Isn't it true that he was demoted back to the captaincy?

A. He was demoted by this fellow that I referred to, Commissioner Fenning, because one of his traffic officers had his wife move her car out of a no-parking zone. He was demoted on that account and for no other reason and Congress passed a bill restoring him. Don't forget, it went through both Houses of Congress and was signed by the President.

Fitzpatrick—You sponsored that? A. I do everything to protect a good officer.

Schulte—Don't you feel that it is unfair to take a man that you say has all of this ability as a police officer and hide him away and make him a snooper, which the department has done in making him go around and watching and trying to catch the police who have been drinking, and sleeping?—A. He has never been a snooper. I don't want you to put something in the record that is not so. That is not so.

Schulte.—You are a member of the District Appropriations Committee?

A. Yes.

Q. Which gives you extraordinary powers evidently with the Police Department and the Fire Department?

A. Not a bit.

Q. To this extent——

A. (interposing). Not a bit in the world.

Q. But you have admitted here that you had gone to the front for Inspector Headley to be made Assistant Superintendent of the police?

A. Yes.

Q. And that you had gone down the line and had other police promoted.

A. No, maybe I had recommended it together with other recommendations of other people, and other Congressmen, and some of them were promoted and some were not.

Letters Exhibited in Blanton-Bean Ouster Controversy

Government of the District of Columbia
METROPOLITAN POLICE DEPARTMENT

REPLY TO MAJOR AND SUPERINTENDENT

August 8, 1934.

Honorable Thomas L. Blanton,
Abilene, Texas.

My dear Congressman Blanton:

I am in receipt of your letter of the 4th instant, in which you refer to our conversation some months ago in connection with the position of Assistant Superintendent of Police, in which it was our understanding that there would be a vacancy in this position very shortly, due to the retirement of one of the Assistant Superintendents.

In reply, permit me to advise that it is my understanding that one of the Assistant Superintendents contemplates retiring in the very near future, and although he has not mentioned it to me, through other sources he has made the statement that he would not continue in the service again during cold weather, and in the event this vacancy occurs, our agreement will be carried out as discussed by us in your office.

It may be of interest to you to know that Inspector Headley is rendering me a most efficient service and is cooperating fully in bringing about improvements in the Department.

I trust you are able to obtain a little rest from your arduous duties during the past session of Congress and your campaign for renomination.

I intended writing you before expressing the congratulations and best wishes of the membership of the Police Department on your renomination, which we know is equivalent to your election as a member of Congress.

With personal best wishes, I am,

Sincerely yours,

Ernest W. Brown,
Major and Superintendent.

My dear Major Brown:

You will remember the Gentleman's Agreement we had that the Assistant Superintendent only wanted to hold the office a short time and would then retire and that you would then give the place to Inspector Albert J. Headley. I am counting on you to carry out this agreement, and would appreciate your advising me just how soon this change will be effected.

Very sincerely yours,

Hauptmann Calm as 3 Slayers Walk Past His Cell to the Chair

'Pray to God,' He Tells Death House Neighbors as They Go to Die.

By the United Press.

Trenton, N. J., March 15.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann tonight saw three men march past his death house cell to the electric chair.

The condemned slayer of baby Charles A. Lindbergh, jr., awaiting result of his appeal against the death sentence, sat in No. 1 cell, near the door to the execution chamber.

Those who died were Connie Scarpone, 26, Michael Mule, 24, and George de Stefano, 25, all of Trenton. They killed John Szcytkowski, 37, in October, 1933, in a vain effort to get $500.

They had screamed insults at Hauptmann since the first day he entered the death house. They called him "baby killer." But tonight, in the shadow of the chair, they shook hands with him.

Each paused as he passed Hauptmann's cell on the grim "last mile" to retribution, thrust his hand through the bars and muttered "Good-by." Hauptmann's answer to each was the same, "Pray to God."

Prison officials said Hauptmann's face was an emotionless mask as he shook hands with the men. His last word to each was believed indicative of an increased interest in religion he has manifested since he asked for a Bible when he first arrived.

Next week Hauptmann will see Kurt Barth, another inmate of the death house, march by him to the chair. Wiley Jones and John Fevorito, like the German, await result of appeals.

There was no blink of the prison lights to indicate the death current had been applied. Lethal power is supplied by a separate line. There was only a pause of a few minutes between each man's passing. It was all over in 25 minutes.

Wife Trading Divorces Denied, Lindsey Takes Away Children

Judge Gives Custody to Grandparents in Case at Los Angeles.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, March 15.—Superior Judge Ben B. Lindsey denied divorce decrees today to Mr. and Mrs. Walter W. Emerson, socially prominent figures in an alleged wife-trading episode involving Mr. and Mrs. Barton Sewell, and deprived the Emersons of custody of their three children.

Judge Lindsey, noted as a domestic relations jurist, decreed the Emerson children, all boys, should become wards of Mrs. Emerson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Scholtz.

Judge Lindsey ruled Emerson was not entitled to a divorce because he consented to and connived in Mrs. Emerson's misconduct with Sewell, a wealthy Beverly Hills sportsman.

Mrs. Emerson's cross suit for a decree was rejected on the ground that her allegation of nonsupport had not been sustained by the evidence.

The focal point of the fight was custody of the Emerson boys, the eldest of whom is 11.

Emerson, handsome actor and writer, first brought suit against Jane Scholtz Emerson, beautiful Denver socialite, naming Sewell as corespondent. Mrs. Emerson filed a cross-complaint, alleging misconduct between Emerson and Mrs. Leah C. Sewell. Each asked custody of the children.

Mrs. Sewell sued Mrs. Emerson for $100,000, alleging alienation of affections. Sewell filed a reply admitting intimacy with Mrs. Emerson, but asserting their liaison was with Emerson's consent.

Judge Lindsey called 11-year-old Walter Emerson, jr., to his chambers before taking the case under advisement. Three times, within the next two days, he conferred with the boy.

Fish Breaks Down After Son's Story

Tortured Self With Needle, Testimony at Trial.

By the Associated Press.

White Plains, N. Y., March 15.—Tears dripped from the pale blue eyes of shrivelled Albert Howard Fish—accused of the brutal slaying of 10-year-old Grace Budd—as his daughter, Mrs. Gertrude de Marco, helping defense attempts to prove him a sadistic maniac, broke down and sobbed on the witness stand today.

The old man's momentary breakdown came after he heard his eldest son, Albert Fish, jr., tell the jury that his father thought himself to be Christ, devoured raw steak on days when a full moon was visible, and tortured himself with a spiked paddle and by injecting needles into his body.

The younger Fish, frequently staring at his father and wiping tears from his eyes, related the sordid tale of his life with the defendant after the State had closed its case with the testimony of Dr. Dudley Morton, of Columbia University, an anatomist, called to reconstruct the skeleton of a little decapitated child. He fixed the age as between 10 and 12 years and said the bones, rattled before the jury in a pasteboard box, were those of a girl.

Boileau Voices House Defense Of Liberal Bloc

Supports President Better Than Do Some Regulars, Says Leader.

By the Associated Press.

A leader of the newly organized Liberals told the House yesterday the President commanded greater support from some of that bloc than from many "so-called Democratic regulars."

Representative Boileau (Progressive), Wisconsin, who voiced the opinion, also said he saw a threat of patronage removal in the rebuke to Democrats who sat in on a meeting of the Liberals which was administered Thursday by Representative Fuller (Democrat), Arkansas. Fuller is chairman of the Democratic patronage committee.

Shaking his black-thatched head emphatically in time with his gestures, Boileau assured the House attempts to "intimidate Democratic members of the new Liberal bloc will not succeed." Of Fuller's barbed remarks, the Progressive asserted:

"It was undoubtedly an attempt to intimidate the Democartic members who sought to join a Liberal bloc. I do not believe that any member will be intimidated by that speech, which was a threat to deprive the Democrats of patronage."

He agreed with Representative Maverick (Democrat), Texas, it was "rather stupid" of the regulars to give the Liberals a lot of advertising.

At the same time, one of the regulars, Representative Beam (Democrat), Illinois, wanted it made perfectly clear he had nothing to do with the Liberal movement, which Fuller had described as the genesis of a third party.

He told his colleagues on the floor that he had been quoted as saying, "if this (assembly with Liberals) be treason, make the most of it." But the words actually were those of Representative Carpenter (Democrat), Kansas, who somewhat resembles Beam.

"I have no sympathy with this move," Beam declared. "I'm a Democrat and stand 100 per cent behind the Administration."

Off the floor, he said that "as a 100 per cent Democrat, I would say that the so-called Liberal bloc is endangering the progress toward recovery made up to now. Such moves always fall of their own weight."

Gov. Laffoon Plans Wholesale Paroles

By the Associated Press.

Frankfort, Ky., March 15.—Gov. Ruby Laffoon appointed a commission today to make a survey of Kentucky's two prisons with a view of recommending the release on parole of a large number of convicts. Conditions at the reformatory here and the penitentiary at Eddyville were described by the Governor as "intolerable."

Declaring that appropriations for the institutions were inadequate at the time they were made, the Governor said, "Since then all supplies that have to be furnished have advanced in price, and the number of inhabitants has very materially increased. The State has no money that can be used in capital outlay."

The Governor said the necessity for some action to release convicts, especially young first offenders, arose from serious overcrowding and from the fact that most of the approximately 4,000 prisoners are idle.

Phillips Lord to Sell Ship of His Troubles

Tutuila, American Samoa, March 15 (AP).—Phillips, Lord, radio entertainer under the name of Seth Parker, was on board the liner Mariposa today, bound for Hawaii with the expressed intention of selling his round-the-world schooner Seth Parker.

Lord boarded the liner here yesterday, leaving behind the schooner, which was towed here by the Navy tug Ontario after her wireless had kept South Seas shipping in an uproar for days when she was caught in a storm February 9.

Wales Will Improve Bagpipe Technique

By the Associated Press.

London, March 15.—The Prince of Wales is brushing up on his bagpiping.

Piper Fletcher, young Glasgow Scots Guardsman, has received an appointment as piper at St. James Palace, where he will instruct the prince in the advanced technique of bagpipe playing.

Piper Fletcher was selected for the post by Pipe Maj. Alexander MacDonald, of the First Scots Guard, some weeks ago, when the prince sent the score of his slow march for bagpipes to the regiment and asked that an experienced player be placed at his service for six months.

Van Sweringen Secret Parleys With Jones Hit

Rail Bondholders Group Charges Morgan Backs Brothers' Program.

Representatives of an "independent committee" of Missouri Pacific Railroad bondholders yesterday protested to Chairman Jesse H. Jones, of the RFC, against granting secret conferences to the Van Sweringen brothers regarding the reorganization of that road.

Such conferences have given the impression that the Van Sweringens are proceeding with the approval of the Government, the committee charged, whereas they "do not have a single dollar of their own money" invested in the Missouri Pacific Railroad.

The group termed the Van Sweringens "intruders" who have built up control "by skillful use of corporate and legal machinery," and added that they "are now seeking to lift themselves up by their bootstraps," using RFC conferences to this end.

The committee representatives—Charles A. Beard, of New Milford, Conn., and Maxwell Brandsen, New York attorney—charged further that back of the Van Sweringen plans for reorganization of the railroad is a New York banking syndicate, headed by J. P. Morgan & Co.

The Van Sweringens owe this syndicate $48,000,000, according to the committee. The interests of this group, it was contended, are adverse to those of the bondholders—"a circumstance which calls * * * for excluding them at all costs."

The bondholders committee urged further that the RFC go slow with reorganization plans, and that meetings with interested parties be open to all security holders and to the press. Only by open meetings, the committee said, can bondholders be protected against "misconceptions."

Questioned about his recent conferences with the Van Sweringens, Mr. Jones said Thursday that he understood it was obligatory for railroad managements to present reorganization plans, when in difficulties, but that any others can do so.

Bloc to Oppose Pay Roll Taxes In Social Bill

House Committee Members to Ask Change in Old Age Plan.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Sentiment has developed in the House Ways and Means Committee for elimination of pay roll taxes to finance old-age pensions, it became known yesterday.

Several members plan to back an amendment which would sharply curtail the Administration's projected economic security program by junking a section of the Wagner-Lewis bill intended to set up a Federal compulsory annuity system.

Employers and employes alike, proponents of the amendment argued, oppose the mandatory system, which would tax all persons who earn less than $250 a month and all employers on a graduated scale beginning at 1 per cent and increasing to a maximum of 3 per cent for each group.

Saving For Business Seen.

The saving to business would be enormous should that phase of the security program be abandoned, as it has been estimated that the pay roll taxes, plus interest, would total $50,000,000,000 by 1980. Pensions of $30 a month would go to the eligible over 65, beginning in about 1947.

Treasury experts are so certain the bill will be passed substantially as it is they already are talking of the money Uncle Sam could save by financing short-term borrowing out of the pension fund instead of in private channels.

With friends and enemies of the plan busy mustering votes, a test on the issue probably will be had in the committee next week.

Will See Roosevelt.

At least another fortnight will elapse before the committee finishes consideration of the bill. Hope of obtaining Congressional passage in time for State legislatures now in session to enact bills conforming to the Federal measure has been abandoned.

Perhaps the most important changes in the original draft, already approved by the committee, tend to curb the authority of Washington officials to the advantage of State administrations.

The committee has definitely broken with Secretary Perkins by voting to place jurisdiction of the program under a separate board instead of in the Labor Department as originally contemplated.

No date has been set for a White House conference, due to be held before the committees files its report and the revised bill with the House. President Roosevelt will be asked for his opinion on the revamped measure.

Allen Land Bill Approved.

Phoenix, Ariz., March 15 (AP).—The Arizona Senate, acting as a committee of the whole, today recommended passage of an allen land bill patterned after the law in California, prohibiting ineligible aliens from owning and cultivating land in Arizona, or cultivating on a share crop basis.

U. S. Corrals 1,909 in Raids

Seize 12 Here; Take Property Worth Millions

Record Criminal Drive Is Pressed; Arrests May Reach 2,500.

"must have arrested at least 1,500 persons."

Drug dealers, counterfeiters, smugglers, tax evaders, bootleggers, safe crackers and a host of minor violators were behind bars or awaiting trial under bond, and the value of the property seized by the Federal operatives was close to the $2,000,000 mark.

Every available officer in each of the Treasury's police agencies was massed for the crime attack, and the agencies worked as a unit for the first time in the history of the department. Arrests were made for every law for the enforcement of which the Treasury is responsible, and many were held for crimes uncovered as a result of months of investigation.

12,000 Aid in Raids.

Nearly 12,000 men were thrown into the attack, many of them working at a 24-hour stretch without sleep. The Coast Guard mobilized 9,000 officers and made its drive by land, sea and air. The Alcohol Tax Unit provided 1,700 men. Three hundred came from the Narcotics Bureau, 240 from the Secret Service, 125 from Customs and 152 from the Intelligence Unit of the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

In Washington the attack concentrated on narcotic violators in a manner never witnessed here before and with results Narcotics Commissioner Harry Anslinger described as "the greatest ever." In a series of rapid-fire raids, some of them carrying Federal agents and Metropolitan police into homes in some of the finest residential districts in the city, seven men and four women fell into the United States net.

Drug seizures here exceeded 50 ounces with a value of about $20,000. The raiders broke into the Washington ends of at least two dope rings having ramifications in New York and the Middle West and throughout the South. At least eight of those arrested, according to James J. Biggins, chief special agent, and Boyd Martin, chief of this narcotic district, who directed operations, dealt in heroin in wholesale lots and constituted virtually the only sources of supply in the District.

Q Street Raid.

One of those arrested was Carl Belohlavak, alias Carl Bullo. He was taken in a raid in the 1700 block of Q street in the exclusive Dupont Circle district. Undercover men bought 12 ounces of heroin from him and agents said he bragged to them that he had connections in New York through which he was able, by use of an airplane, to deliver drugs in any amount on a moment's notice. Belohlavak has has been operating here and in Cleveland for many years, officers said.

Carefully concealing their activities, the raiders here went to work at 4 p. m., Thursday and stopped 12 hours later. They chased a man and woman from Thomas Circle to Thirteenth and L streets northwest in a wild midnight ride. The couple had been peddling drugs in the Thomas Circle vicinity all afternoon, raiders said. They nabbed one man in the 800 block of Ninth street northwest and a few minutes later caught his partner selling narcotics in the neighborhood of the Capitol.

The raiders moved over to the 2100 block of P street northwest, taking a man who had offered to sell their undercover agents drugs in thousand-gram lots. Raids were also made in the 1700 block of Seventeenth street northwest, in the 900 block of Hamilton street, in the same block of New York avenue and in a downtown hotel. Detectives Charles E. Mansfield and Dan H. Jones, of the Metropolitan Police Department, were assigned to aid the Federals, earning Chief Martin's praise for "fine cooperation."

Meanwhile, yesterday the National crime mop-up moved locally in a surprising direction as agents of the Alcohol Control Unit made tours of inspection of more than 350 bars and liquor stores. Fifty-four law violations were noted, many of them involving nonpayment of the Federal occupational tax required of hard liquor dealers. No arrests were made but in many cases fines were imposed.

Singly and in pairs, the narcotic prisoners faced United States Commissioner Needham Turnage to hear Federal agents testify against them. In order of their arraignment, the accused addicts and dope peddlers were:

Mosbey Williams, alias "Sonny," 40, of the 900 block of New York avenue northwest, and May Lee, 46, also of the New York avenue address. Both were charged with possession and sale of narcotics. Williams was held in bond of $3,000 and May Lee $500.

Clay Nichols, 33, 2100 block of P street northwest, described as a wholesale peddler. Bond of $5,000 was fixed on charges of possession and sale.

Charles Nader, alias the Kaiser, 60, of the 800 block of Ninth street northwest, and Julian Saunders, 26, of the 500 block of L street northwest. Possession and sale charges held them in $5,000 bonds each.

Russell V. Claybourne, alias "Whitie," 30, of the 900 block of Hamilton street northwest. Bond of $5,000 was set on sale and possession counts.

Released in $2,500 Bond.

Benjamin H. Woolf, 43, of the 1700 block of Seventeenth street northwest, described as a wholesale peddler. Agents testified they found more narcotics in his possession than in all other raids combined. He was held in bond of $10,000.

Lucille Woolf, 30, his wife, was held in $200 bond on a possession charge. She was said to be an expectant mother.

Dorothy Tanner, 24, of the 900 block of Hamilton street northwest, described as operator of a "land-office retail drug business," was held in bond of $2,500 on sale and possession counts.

Charles Bullo, 32, of the 1300 block of Rhode Island avenue northwest, termed a "notorious peddler," was held in $10,000 bond on sale and possession charges.

Bessie Snow, 50, of the 400 block of K street northwest, charged with possession and sale, was held in bond of $500.

Claybourne, Woolf and Bullo were accused as leaders of widespread drug rings. Claybourne was arrested as the drive opened. Agents and police overtook his automobile at Thirteenth and L streets northwest and forced it into the curb. Dorothy Tanner was riding with him. Claybourne attempted to resist arrest, but was overpowered. Police said the Tanner woman, seated in the front of his car, carried a large quantity of alleged narcotics on her lap. Claybourne had several $100 bills sewed in his clothes, police said.

Scenes of Raids.

Bullo was arrested alone while driving his car near Fourteenth and K streets northwest. Others were apprehended in raids in the 1700 block of Seventeenth street northwest, 900 block of Hamilton street northwest, 900 block of New York avenue northwest, and in a downtown hotel.

Agents operating in the Capital captured one of the few income tax violators netted by the Nation-wide drive. He was William Lias, wanted for tax evasion in Wheeling, W. Va.

At the request of Tampa, Fla., police, Washington officers arrested Joseph Allison Stockstill on a charge of raising a $22 pension check to $22,000. Charles Wade, colored, was taken with him.

A late tabulation of results of the crime drive by participating agencies gave the number of arrests as follows: Alcohol Tax Unit, many of whose employes took part without pay due to the controverted McKellar amendment, 968; Narcotics, 530; Secret Service, 48; Customs, 200, and Internal Revenue, 1.

Raids Set Record.

Nothing like this has been known in the annals of American crime detectives. Its closest approach was the huge narcotics drive staged last December when more than 900 drug peddlers and addicts were taken.

The Treasury's policemen struck in 100 cities at once. No section of the country escaped. An airplane directed Coast Guard cutters in chasing rum runners off the Delaware Capes. Chinese smugglers fell into the customs traps in San Francisco. Smuggled aliens were captured in New England. Bootleggers everywhere lost stills worth $138,515 and capable of producing 196,836 gallons of whisky a day.

And in New York in the very shadow of famed Sing Sing prison, Secret Service men fell on a complete counterfeiting plant with two presses and plates for turning out $10 New York Federal Reserve notes. Seven of the ring were arrested, the operator of the plant and six of his New York dealers, and agents confiscated $12,110 in bogus $10 and $20 counterfeit bills made on Federal Reserve banks in Cleveland, Kansas City and Dallas.

Moran Hails Work.

"This was a great raid. Those fellows have been giving us a world of trouble," W. H. Moran, veteran Secret Service chief, declared in evident elation.

His agents went into Huron, S. Dak., to arrest one man in connection with a conspiracy to manufacture their own nickles, dimes and 50-cent pieces. In Los Angeles they found two with previous criminal records and charged them with making $10 bills out of $1 silver certificates and $2 United States notes. Counterfeit note passers also were found in Cleveland, where all six have previous convictions, Miami, Huntington, W. Va., Sterling, Colo., Denver, Oklahoma City and Indianapolis.

As reports of arrests piled up in the office of Assistant Treasury Secretary Herbert Gaston, the list of known criminals grew and officials because caustic about the Nation's probationary system, which had freed many of them.

"They're just turning them back to crime," said one, commenting on the fact that a Washington woman was under a two-year suspended sentence when arrested by drug raiders.

Bursting Levee Floods Farms As 5,000 Flee

Rivers Continue Rampage in Midwest; Potomac at Normal Level.

Spring flood waters rose from the rivers of the Middle West yesterday, crawling over thousands of acres of rich farm lands and driving families from their homes.

The turbulent St. Lawrence River tore a gap in the levee at Kennett, Mo., spread over a mile-wide area and drove 5,000 from their dwellings. Four National Guard companies that had been patrolling the wall gave the alarm in time to save most of the live stock. Army tents were quickly assembled to shelter the refugees.

Homeless Increase.

The Red Cross yesterday feared the number of homeless might be doubled today. Swirling backwaters of the Mississippi River inundated 3,000 acres in Perry County, Mo.

While forecasts of rain held threat of rising waters in Illinois and the Ohio Valley, the Weather Bureau here said there was little or no danger of high water or flood for Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia.

The Potomac River was at its normal early spring level, and Rock Creek stayed well within its boundaries.

"There is no danger of flood here unless we have heavy, unexpected rain," Dr. W. J. Moxom, acting director of the rivers and floods division of the Weather Bureau, asserted.

Today Fair.

Today will be fair and the mercury will caper in the 70's, with light breezes fanning the city.

Yesterday's low was 31 degrees, at 4 a. m., and 58 at 4 p. m.

The Associated Press reported a crest of 50 feet at Cincinnati, Ohio, yesterday, with 52 expected today. West Portsmouth, Ohio, was isolated by the Ohio and Scioto rivers, and residents at Maysville, Ky., were moving from the lower parts of the city to dry land.

At Beardstown, Ill., the Illinois River reached the 16.2 stage—highest since 1933.

Flood conditions were most serious around Fisk and Kennett, Mo., the Associated Press asserted, and at St. Francis, Ark. More than 50,000 acres near Kennett were under water, and 2,000 families were dependent on the Red Cross for temporary shelter.

3-Year Fox Contract Signed by Will Rogers

Hollywood, March 15 (AP).—Will Rogers signed a new three-year contract with Fox Film Corporation today.

All philatelic records were broken yesterday when the "Farley" ungummed and imperforate stamp issues were placed on sale. Three collectors are pictured at the Philatelic Agency. Left to right, John L. Kuhn, of Mount Vernon, N. Y.; William Schlechter, of Allentown, Pa., and A. J. Mitula, of Houston, Tex.

000 in a single day's sale, which was made at Chicago on August 25, 1933, when the 1 and 3 cent Century of Progress issues were sold.

First Day Covers.

In the matter of first day covers, envelopes on which stamps were glued and mailed on the first day of sale, the city postoffice handled 63,125.

More than an hour before the day's business began, lines of prospective customers had formed. They developed into crowds composed of men and women of all ages, military officers in uniform, and children. A special detail of police was on hand in each corridor.

Among the purchasers were youths who had hitch-hiked from distant cities to be on hand for the first day of the sale. Philatelists, although all of the issues are now in use in regular form, consider those being sold entirely new issues despite this fact.

The sale will continue an indefinite period, it was said. A total of $1,700,000 of the stams has been printed, and the Philatelic Agency hopes to sell them all. The total business of the agency last year was $800,000.

Senator Huey P. Long, of Louisiana, foe of the Postmaster General, was not at the sale. Long, who attacked Farley's distribution of the original imperforate sheets, said: "I am interested in Farley but not in his stamps."

Here is pictured the throng which yesterday purchased more stamps than ever were sold in a day. The scene is the Philatelic Agency at the Postoffice Department as 20 issues were offered to the public.

Weather Report May Set Time For Robot Hop

Extreme Caution in Tests Is Ordered by Vidal, Snow Explains.

Oakland, Calif., March 15.—The Government's radio compass-robot-controlled airplane remained on the ground today while its all-star crew of aviators and technicians studied weather reports and talked little about whether they were going to fly to Hawaii or any other distant place soon.

Maj. Chester Snow, Army Reserve airman in charge, announced plans for "going up" depended upon "circumstances which I can't control."

Unfavorable flying conditions prevailed about half way between here and Hawaii at the time.

Await Favorable Conditions.

Snow said there might be developments if conditions warranted, but that further flights would depend on the weather and on radio reception.

He issued a written statement saying the purpose of the flights was to ascertain to what extent ordinary radio communication facilities, operated in conjunction with an airplane radio compass would facilitate "over-water transportation."

Having made three test flights, the twin-motored, instrument-laden ship remained on the landing field here throughout last night, fuelled and equipped for an ocean flight, but bad weather forced the fliers to abandon all thought of an immediate takeoff.

Vidal Orders Caution.

Snow said Eugene Vidal, of the United States Department of Commerce, had instructed him to use "extreme caution in the tests and I am following his instructions meticulously." The operations are in behalf of that department.

Capt. Albert F. Hegenberger, navigator, and Capt. Clayton Bissell, the pilot, rested while Snow studied weather maps and explained the situation.

Successful conclusion of the experiments would mean that aviators, by tuning in on ordinary radio stations, could determine their positions automatically and accurately during ocean flights.

Removal of Flags In Capital Attacked

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., March 15.—Removal of the American flag from Federal buildings in Washington by "insidious propaganda" was denounced today by the New Jersey Daughters of the American Revolution.

The society, holding its annual convention in the statehouse, adopted without debate a resolution which said:

"The American flag has been deliberately removed from the roofs of Federal buildings in Washington, D. C., * * * by an insidious propaganda in the form of a change in the design of Federal buildings which have been recently erected in Washington and elsewhere throughout the Nation.

"This new design failed to provide for flagpoles on the roofs of Federal buildings from which the American flag could be displayed."

Trio Die Trying To Slay Ibn Saud

mony that Ibn Saud, who follows his Mohammedan creed strictly, was performing at the time of the attack.

Seven encirclements of the Kaaba, the nearly cubical stone building built in 1626 to reproduce the temple of Mohammed's time which contains the sacred stone, conclude the ceremony of sacrifice. The King and crown prince were making the fourth circuit when the assailants rushed forward.

Afterward, the official announcement said, Ibn Saud and the Emir Saud completed the circuits of the Kaaba, entered, kissed the stone and returned to the palace "as if nothing had happened."

A picturesque figure in his flowing Arabian headdress, the 55-year-old monarch, sometimes called the "Cromwell of the Hedjaz" for the fearlessness and hard-handedness of his rule, stands 6 feet, 4 inches.

Ibn Saud follows his Mohammedan code strictly in every respect, including faithful observance of its stipulations as to the proper number of wives.

He never has more than four at any time, although popular belief is that he has had as many as 100 in all through divorces and "replacements."

Cabinet at Athens Quits for Shake-Up

By the Associated Press.

Athens, March 15.—All members of the Greek cabinet except Gen. George Kondylis, minister of war, and John Metaxas, minister without portfolio, resigned today to allow Premier Panayoti Tsaldaris to make any desired reorganization.

Previously the cabinet voted to mete out exemplary punishment to all participating in the short-lived revolution headed by former Premier Eleutherios Venizelos.

Kondylis, the "hero of the revolution," and considered the most powerful figure in Greece today, said in response to an inquiry as to whether he intended to become dictator, that he saw "no likelihood of dictatorship, although that possibility is not excluded." He also scouted reports that the monarchy might be restored.

Admirable Suggestion.

In officially advocating the withdrawal of armed forces from the Manchukuoan-Siberian border, the Soviet commissar for foreign affairs, Maxim Litvinoff, advances a proposal which can not fail to appeal as a logical and altogether desirable step in the direction of peace in the Far East.

Now that the prolonged and perilous wrangling over the Chinese Eastern Railway is being replaced by a mutually satisfactory settlement, one disturbing factor in Soviet-Japanese relations is on the road to elimination. It would be "quite natural," Litvinoff is quoted as saying, to follow this by the withdrawal of armed forces, including airplanes, from the frontier. By far the greatest irritant and the most constant cause of talk about another Russo-Japanese war is the ever-menacing presence of rival forces arrayed along this border.

The rest of the world will await with interest Japan's response to the suggestion. The tone adopted in Tokyo toward the Soviet's proposal for a guarantee pact and, incidentally, in objecting to establishment of commercial airplane landing fields on our Pacific islands, hardly suggests a receptive attitude. But it is difficult to see how Japan could reconcile her avowedly peaceful intentions with a refusal to take the one step that would be the most convincing proof of sincerity.

Although accompanying Litvinoff's suggestion was a warning that the Soviet might feel compelled to take further "defensive measures" as an offset to the rearming of Germany, he has succeeded, nevertheless, in injecting a most practical note of peace into the welter of world discords.

The Blossoms Will Be There.

The Cherry Blossom Festival, previously announced as an annual event, is not likely to be repeated this spring. Even if there were no deficit hanging over from last year, perhaps it's just as well that plans for organizing jollity by the committee system are in abeyance.

There is such a thing as "gilding the lily" and this applies even when the lily is a cherry blossom. The trees, sent as a good-will token from Tokyo, were planted in 1912. The crowds which throng the Point every year at the time of their flowering more than attest the famous beauty of the scene. Perennial parades, perennial queens, perennial maids-of-honor and other side-shows add nothing, and can add nothing, to nature's bountiful pink and white panorama in Potomac Park.

There are certain features attendant on the blooming of these trees which time has made traditional. One of these is the annual visit of the Japanese Ambassador and his family, photographed under the trees for the benefit of rotogravure and postcard. Another is the annual guessing and prophesying as to the approximate date when the first blossom will make its appearance. Still a third is the predictions about the weather.

These are a few of the inescapable and time-honored customs that have sprung up naturally. But they have nothing to do with planned pleasure, military parades, air circuses or other forms of boosting. In calculated ballyhoo lies more than a slight risk of not being able to see the cherry blossoms for the festival.

In Hungarian History.

Many a message of official sympathy is a mere matter of etiquette. It is, however, with a strict adherence to both the letter and the spirit of veracity that the Hungarian Minister at Washington has telegraphed the surviving sister of Jeremiah Smith, jr.: "The signal contribution of your brother to Hungary's financial reconstruction, his unselfish devotion and his sympathetic approach to his difficult task . . . will not only endear his memory to the present generation of Hungarians, but will find lasting recognition in Hungarian history."

There may be differences of opinion regarding the permanent value of the work of financial reconstruction accomplished by Mr. Smith for Hungary. Criticism of his skill, his resourcefulness, his endearing personality, there never was and never could be. It is seldom indeed that a foreigner goes upon a delicate mission among a lastly proud and independent people and succeeds as did Jeremiah Smith. Yet this New Hampshire Yankee, sent to Budapest by the League of Nations as commissioner-general for Hungary, captured the respect of the entire population, achieved the whole-hearted cooperation of the government, and kept always those best results of his tact and good will.

He was an example of the best type of American mind, and the best type of American vigor, working constructively in the field of world affairs. It is because of such scrupulous fair-dealing as his that Europe so regrets our hesitation to participate in the wider phases of international relations.

The "Gentleman's Agreement."

One of the weakest points in the entire District government has at last been exposed by the House District Crime Committee. Behind the ineffectiveness of the local police and the sporadic nature of their attempts to enforce the law there is now revealed the sorry story of a "gentleman's agreement" between the police superintendent and a Texas politician.

For years citizens of the District have suspected Representative Blanton of bulldozing local officials. As a member of the District appropriations sub-committee in the House, he has used his influence to thwart numerous measures of special importance to Washington. On several occasions he has been accused of trying to force the appointment of favored constituents to District positions. Now he is exposed as the sponsor of this disgraceful "gentleman's agreement" designed to displace a trusted assistant superintendent of police in order to make room for an officer who has a claim upon his friendship.

This sort of procedure is intolerable, regardless of who the offender may be. When it is employed by a member of Congress who pretends to a pious interest in the welfare of the District its vicious and demoralizing influence is doubled. Mr. Blanton has gone to the Police Department, like an ordinary "fixer," to obtain special privileges. He is accused of using his power over the District's purse strings to coerce a governmental agency over which he has no constituted authority. With such schooling from above is it surprising that policemen are susceptible to corruption in their contacts with the underworld?

Mr. Blanton has tried to cover up the significance of this exposure by braggadocio. The very fact that he sought "congressional immunity" from a searching cross-examination is significant. With admirable public spirit, the committee insisted that he should be treated as merely another witness. Chairman Randolph and his colleagues are apparently determined to bring out the facts, ugly as they are, and let the blame fall where it will. They can not be too warmly commended for this attitude.

While the major responsibility for this scandal is traced to Mr. Blanton, the part which Maj. Brown has played also raises a question as to his future usefulness as superintendent of police. No city can afford to entrust the protection of its citizens to an official who makes "gentleman's agreements" of this character. Any one who reads Mr. Blanton's letters to Maj. Brown will understand the type of pressure to which he was subjected. But when a superintendent of police compromises on matters pertaining to his own force, extenuating circumstances lose their significance.

Whatever disciplinary action is taken, it will unfortunately fall with the least weight upon the most culpable participant in this unsavory affair. But one salutary step can and should be taken without delay. Representative Blanton's connection with the District appropriations sub-committee should be permanently severed. He will not again be able to bloc District legislation without arousing suspicion that he is trying to punish some faithful Washington official who has honestly resisted the Texan's designs.

A Timely Warning.

Lewis W. Douglas, recently Director of the Budget, gives warning that a currency collapse is certain to occur if present spending policies are followed long enough. In the event of such a catastrophe, Mr. Douglas concludes, "Only a dictator—whether it be a dictator of socialism or a dictator of fascism is unimportant—will be adequate to cope with the situation."

To support his assertion the former Treasury official notes that the emergency of 1933 resulted in vesting in the Executive larger powers than had ever before been accorded. An even greater emergncy, created by destruction of the currency system of the country, might, therefore, as Mr. Douglas says, lead to a complete change in our political organization from necessity, not from popular choice.

The political dangers of that inflation which destroys, or largely destroys, the purchasing power of money are strikingly revealed by the post-war experiences of countries such as Germany, France and Italy. The impotence of legislatures in face of chronic budgetary deficits which necessitated currency inflation in every case led to the exercise of dictatorial powers by those in authority.

France found a way out of her dilemma without sacrificing her representative institutions but dictatorial powers had to be exercised temporarily by Poincare to stabilize the franc. While the emergency of the present Nazi regime in Germany is due to a variety of causes, Germany's financial difficulties unquestionably paved the way for Hitler's dictatorship. In Italy, likewise, budgetary disorder was a contributory cause of political unrest, and smoothed the way for transition from a liberal government to fascism.

Consequently, the United States can not afford to ignore the warnings of an experienced administrator and financial expert when he cites the unfortunate political consequences of chronic deficits which impair the public credit and thus deprive the government of resources essential to its effective functioning. Nor is the warning voiced by Mr. Douglas less timely because it came on the eve of March 15. The strain of making income tax payments has this year been very heavy for many Americans. It is discouraging to reflect that in spite of the magnitude of this effort, not half of the Government's current expenditures are being covered by its receipts.

Working At Cross Purposes.

Last spring an executive order was issued directing the Federal Trade Commission and the National Recovery Administration to "study further and jointly the operation of the basing-point system and its effects" and to make recommendations for further revision of the steel code in accordance with their findings.

Instead of one report, the President has been presented with two, embodying diametrically opposed views of the value of the basing-point system of quoting prices. The Federal Trade Commission concludes that the system not only permits and encourages price fixing but that it is price fixing. The NRA report suggests a modification of the present methods of quoting prices but emphasizes the importance of avoiding any violent disruption of the system now in force.

The conflict between these two agencies of the Government over the price sections of the steel code is of long standing. Last spring the Federal Trade Commission made a special report to the Senate, condemning the multiple basing-point system authorized in the steel code. Under that system prices are quoted for a number of designated centers and freight charges to destination are added. It is undoubtedly an arbitrary and artificial system of price quotations. The Federal Trade Commission, moreover, charges that collusive activities among producers result in identical base prices.

In the special report of the NRA, however, it is maintained that price fixing will not be prevented by abolishing the basing-point system and return to an individual mill-base system is characterized as "too disturbing a change to undertake at this time, if ever." Certainly the last named method of quoting prices would greatly limit the area within which a mill could dispose of its products and would result in great changes in consumers' prices. On the other hand, there is considerable economic waste due to the cross-hauling of steel products made possible by the basing-point system.

However, the economic advantages and disadvantages of the basing-point system can be debated endlessly, as profound differences of opinion regarding its merits are held by experts. What attracts the attention of the uninitiated public is the conflict of policy which leads the Federal Trade Commission to denounce practices that another governmental agency approves. The F. T. C. is a permanent organization charged with enforcement of the antitrust laws. The recovery administration, on the other hand, was established under a temporary act which modified the restrictive provisions of the antitrust laws but left their status far from clear.

In defending the action of the NRA in approving the steel code, Donald Richberg pointed out some time ago that the multiple basing-point system had been in existence ever since the Federal Trade Commission in 1924 forced the industry to abandon its policy of quoting prices from a single base—Pittsburgh. Mr. Richberg argued that the nine years' silence of the commission warranted the assumption that it did not consider the multiple basing-point system illegal. Nevertheless the Trade Commission not only raised a protest against the perpetuation of the system in the steel code but it now opposes the compromise recommended by NRA investigators.

The public is not qualified to determine the merits of a highly technical issue of this sort. But it is justified in asking that the law be clarified so that such obstructive conflicts between the administrative agents of Government shall be avoided. The decision should not be left to the industry itself, and apparently there is no basis for compromise between the F. T. C. and the NRA.

Consequently, responsibility rests with Congress and the Administration to define the powers of the F. T. C. and to determine the limits of the discretionary authority vested in the NRA. Consistent policies can not be developed nor can laws be effectively enforced when the administrative agencies of Government are working at cross purposes.

Justice Holmes' Will.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

In the debate last week on the Sumners Supreme Court retirement bill, Congressman Blanton, of Texas, raised the crude objection that if it had been in force in the years since the late Justice Holmes reached the age of 70, the latter might have retired and enjoyed full pay of $20,000 for many years.

The will of the grand old jurist was filed Saturday in Washington, D. C. It disclosed that he had left the residue of his estate, after certain bequests, to the United States. The estimate is that the share of the United States will run to $250,000. A server of the Federal Government for nearly 30 years, he gave back to it most generously from what had been given to him. Justice Holmes' will is the complete answer to the Texan.

You Gotta Be Presentable.

Now We Shall Turn To Other Issues

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I am in cordial sympathy with "Old Washingtonian's" criticism of the National Symphony Orchestra, and I am glad to see that even those specimens of Dr. Kindler's fan mail, which have been diverted to your columns during the last day or two, at least tend to agree that it is, on the whole, irritating to have a broadcast in which one is interested interrupted by another in which one takes no interest whatever.

In this particular case, however, I think "Old Washingtonian's" complaint, though just in itself, can not justly lie against the National Symphony Orchestra, since the fault is inherent in a theory and practice of broadcasting which would cheerfully cut off the last 15 minutes of the "Sermon on the Mount" in order that an eligible opportunity might be provided to sell a laxative.

In any case, however, this complaint is only incidental. The bull's-eye of the target which "Old Washingtonian" has so obligingly set up is his generous contention that the National Symphony Orchestra is definitely second-rate, and it is even extraordinary to see with what unerring aim your dissenting correspondents miss it. The fact that these correspondents happen to like one orchestra or one conductor better than another; that they think it is nice to give local talent a chance; that they are teeming with civic pride, has no apparent connection that I can see with the quality of the National Symphony Orchestra.

"I, too, can rip with old Euripides and cant with old cantharides, but what," asked an impassioned Senator, long since gone to a reward which I trust is adequate, "what has that to do with the politics of Wisconsin?"—no more, indeed, than our American fervor in coddling the less fit at the expense of the more fit, in "doing good" to others as an easy substitute for being good ourselves, in smugly patronizing and uplifting those whom we label "forgotten men" and "the underprivileged;" no more, I say, than these glib sales gestures have to do with raising the quality of symphony orchestras, or of anything else.

What makes a really first-class symphony orchestra possible is a community determined, in the first place, to have just that and nothing else, and willing, in the second place, to pay musicians who are capable through talent, training, and experience, to play the highest grade of music in the best way, enough money to enable them to do, if required, just that and nothing else. Any musician accustomed to playing in first-class orchestras knows this; no doubt, Dr. Kindler, who as a conductor is still in his swaddling clothes, with the National Symphony Orchestra as a teething ring, must know it.

But the sad and ultimate fact is that Washington, like any other purely political capital, is not this kind of community, and probably never will be, unless, perchance, another Henry L. Higginson should arise or drop in among us and found another Boston Symphony Orchestra to direct the undoubted power of our taste and sentiment toward the support of orchestral music in Washington, not because it is ours, but because it is good.

ANOTHER WASHINGTONIAN.
Washington, March 14.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Although I am not an "Old Washingtonian," I am an old musician, and an old American, and am, therefore, vitally interested in any discussion which concerns the status of art in our Capital City.

Not as choosing between local or visiting musicians nor as arguing as to costly and fashionable concerts versus widespread support of the best music, do I wish to enter this discussion; but rather as a champion of excellence versus "compromise with mediocrity," do I wish to express my admiration for the standards toward which Mr. Kindler is striving. I feel that it is unjust to demand today from his young orchestra what has been achieved in New York, Philadelphia, Boston (and may I add? Chicago) by decades of time and hundreds of thousands of dollars.

This demand seems to me to be, on the contrary, only an additional argument for helping him to do for our Capital what other citizens have done for their own towns, with the hope that, ultimately, Washington may cease to be artistically provincial and become, like other world capitals, a center of music which should lead, rather than follow; lending to, rather than borrowing from, the national fund of artistic brilliance. I can not see that this argument implies the necessity of discouraging visiting artists, but it does, of course, imply the necessity of a financial support which is being given to more and more orchestras throughout the country.

In addition to the artistic prestige, which should attract the whole country to its National Capital, I believe that the citizens of Washington themselves and the cause of music in general would gain by the numerous secondary results which follow the establishment of a leading symphony orchestra in any community. Subsidiary chamber organizations and concerts, solo recitals, eminent teaching and a general spread of musical culture must follow.

Is it too much to hope that one day the National Orchestra may become so in fact as well as in name and that, like other imperative needs of our country, the best music should be guaranteed to its citizens by the Government and exemplified by its maintenance at the governmental center of the Nation?

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge.
Washington, March 13.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I am writing to add my small protest to the intrusion by the National Symphony Orchestra on the broadcast of the New York Symphony concert last Sunday.

We are getting less and less good music in Washington — I do not know why, and although I most highly approve of the efforts of the National Symphony Orchestra, it has yet a very long way to go before it can give us anything approaching the pleasure that the great orchestras do—Philadelphia, Boston and New York.

I think encouragement to these three orchestras to come to Washington would be eventually a help to the National Symphony. The hearing of the best awakes an appetite for the best—and the competition and example would perhaps improve both the playing and conducting of the National Symphony.

A Rather Hungry Music Lover.
Washington, March 13.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I am not a permanent resident of Washington, but it has been my privilege and pleasure to have heard the National Symphony in all its Sunday and many of its Thursday afternoon concerts, and I must say that not one of them sounded "second rate" to me. Of course I am just an ordinary, perhaps "second rate" music lover, and do not as perhaps "Old Washingtonian" does, go to a concert to detect the flaws in technique, but to hear the wonderful music produced.

"Old Washingtonian" lauds to the sky the golden qualities of the great out-of-town orchestras. It is a well known fact that to some, a thing, be it music, a painting, or anything else has little value, quality or beauty unless it comes from a distance and has the "lure of the foreign" about it. In other words, the grass in the other pasture is always the greener.

"Old Washingtonian" ask "is it wise to drive out the few first-class concerts in order to give the public a great many concerts of inferior quality?" The growing attendance figures indicate the people of Washington think so. The fact is more emphasized when one considers that the so-called famous and superior orchestras have been coming here for years and the people are well acquainted with their qualities and still seem to prefer to listen to the "second rate" local orchestra.

No one denies that the standard of the local orchestra can be improved (nothing is perfect) and that many works can not now be undertaken, but to say that the playing of such works as have been undertaken is, or has been "second rate" and inferior is to say that which is not true. In my travels about the country it has been my good fortune to hear many of the so-called fine symphony orchestras and to my mind the present local orchestra does not suffer in the least way by comparison with any of the other great orchestras.

It is my opinion that not one person in a hundred, except trained musicians can tell which of the large symphony orchestras he is listening to, unless he is told or is in the presence of the orchestra. And also I will give as my opinion, that were "Old Washingtonian" living in Boston, he would await with great impatience the coming of a really fine orchestra, say, perhaps, the National Symphony Orchestra of Washington, D. C., under the baton of Dr. Hans Kindler.

WILLIAM VAN ZANDT.
Washington, March 14.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

While "Washingtonians" of various descriptions are rallying to the support of the National Symphony Orchestra, permit me to join their ranks by suggesting that the bequest of half the estate of the late Justice Holmes to the Government be applied to the maintenance of the orchestra through its board of governors.

Though it may be questioned whether such application of the bequest be appropriate or practicable, the purpose is worthy of the donor and it is in line with cultural influences which the Government already encourages. It would be in line with education and art which more and more is being fostered in Washington without dissent. The bequest would be a fixed resource to the National Symphony Orchestra, independent of renewal and the levy of taxes.

Three Score And Thirty.

Post Office, Saturday.

TRUE to its tradition of never being long true to any of its "truths," fickle Science is in rebellion against its old king, Environment. It is trying to restore Heredity to the throne from which Science itself ousted that monarch a generation or so ago. The revolt, moreover, has begun at a vital point: to wit, vital statistics. Thus runs the rebels' battle-cry:

"Length of life depends less on how you live than how long your forefathers did."

Of course, the insurance companies' mortality-tables can't tell you how long you ought to live; all they ever told you was how long most people do live. But they did seem to indicate everybody's chances. You would read that one human being in three attained the age of 70. So you calculated that you (any "you," regardless of ancestors) had one chance in a trio of reaching that age—providing you could manage your environment and weren't kidnaped.

He is Raymond Pearl. He is a B. A. and S. D. (Dartmouth), Ph. D. (Michigan), LL. D. (Maine). And, after a whole lot of work along the same line, he has been professor of Biology at the Johns Hopkins School of Hygiene since 1930.

Among his many writings, "Alcohol and Longevity" has been particularly admired. This Column always preferred his "Variation and Differentiation in Ceratophyllum" even to his "Correlation in the Crayfish."

For quite a while Dr. Pearl has been keeping tabs on the cases of 2,000 persons surviving to the sunny side of the midnineties. He tells about them in the Forum:

"The first, and by far the most important requisite of longevity, is having ancestors who were long lived. In other words, you inherit the biological characteristics of living a long time, just as you inherit blue eyes and red hair."

Dr. Pearl just doesn't believe in Old Parr, who was reputed to have hung on to existence until the age of 152. Dr. Pearl dismisses all such claimants as "deserving of no credence whatsoever." But he presents as typical the genuine case of a lady hale and hearty in the high nonagenarian class.

Her father lived to a mere 78, but her mother held out till 91. The maternal grandfather got within six months of a century, which beat his wife by 21½ years of discretion. The grandmother on the distaff side "stayed around" some 94 years.

And that accounts, says the doctor, for the nonagenentity of the nonegenarian in question.

Long life is due to long lives.

There are some minor factors, to be sure. One of these encourages the Post-Impressionist's hopes for his own duration. Good temper helps heredity—unless you care to quibble and say that good temper is hereditary, too. "The calm and contented type seems to have a very important advantage over the person who is fretful."

We welcome, also, the news that Dr. Pearl's long-livers are not mad about strenuous exercise, and that avoiding tobacco doesn't tighten men's hold upon life. But upon dietary topics we shall let his speak for himself:

"One of the commonest myths about longevity is the notion that dietary coddling and abstinence from alcohol . . . will guarantee a full harvest of years. In the records (of Dr. Pearl's tenacious 2,000) there appears to be little to support this point of view.

"Some of the persons on the list of nonagenarians have been lifelong teetotalers and abstemious eaters; others have habitually tamped home vast cargoes of food and quaffed Olympian draughts of malt and vinous liquors whenever thirst so dictated . . . None of these things appeared to affect longevity either favorably or unfavorably. Obviously abuse can wreck a sturdy frame, but it is also true that no amount of dietary solicitude, and no heroic devotion to a 'daily dozen' will carry an individual into an advanced old age if he has a constitution biologically inadequate for the journey."

Have few of these ancients ever undergone a surgical operation? Don't cast that up to the surgeon; it merely means that people who are qualified to live to 90 are not the kind of people who are susceptible to surgical diseases. Have many of these old folks long "enjoyed poor health?" In biology, mortality and morbidity connote different things.

* * *

You can't get around it—according to Dr. Pearl. Although the doctors are doing much to reduce "premature mortality," by that term they mean merely death before 50. And such reduction is their limit.

If you want to live to be 90, you've got to begin by preparing your great-grandparents for the test.

But do you want to?

British Electorate Insistent On Peace

Labor Party Bases Its Campaign On This Issue And The Voters Are Quick To Respond.

By Edward Acheson.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

THE present National government in England is ill-starred. Having dealt for all of four years in restriction and quota, in order to stave off the disaster of plenty, it now finds its very existence dependent upon the one commodity in which a very effective demand is overwhelmingly greater than any currently conceivable supply. Peace is at a premium, or, more specifically, concrete achievement to secure peace, which can and will convince an electorate that its present leaders are serious in the matter.

And the demand is not to be denied, since it is not very difficult to measure. The Labor Party has won every by-election in the last 18 months in which there has been the slightest doubt of the outcome. It has even won several in which there wasn't any doubt as to its defeat—before the polling. And each of these elections has been fought by Labor, primarily and persistently on the issue of peace. India has been important, the revision of the unemployed relief scales has been important. There has been a host of possible "issues," but the central election committee of the Labor Party has been single-minded and wise. It has instructed every candidate that peace was his one great talking point, that peace should open every speech and close every speech.

The result hasn't left very much doubt about the concern of the country on this point. Nor has the response to the "Peace Ballot" distributed by the League of Nations Union modified that impression. Millions of questionnaires, going into as many homes all over the land, have kept the issue under discussion. The papers, including the Conservative papers, have realized the circulation value of the subject and allot their space accordingly. But the best gauge of public interest is to be found in the amount of money that is paid for "literature," even avowedly partisan "literature," on the possibilities of peace.

THE Labor Party pamphlet, "Socialism and Peace," which sells for 2 pence, was run off in an edition of 20,000 copies. They were sold in less than three weeks. Another edition is going exactly as fast. The election committee was right. Peace is the one subject, which, as a curtain raiser and as a finale, is sure to hold an audience.

And this is embarrassing to the government. Its record in this category to date is not very brilliant, and the fact that the issue can be and is forced at each election, is only another indication that the party in power has lost the initiative. It is almost ludicrous to see an elephant majority, 90 per cent of the House of Commons, bullied and coerced by the other tenth. But that is the situation. Sir Stafford Cripps can now, as indeed he recently did, employ the famous Churchill gesture of daring, coaxing and challenging the government to answer his charges, then sitting down and surrendering the floor, only to rise again in mock bewilderment at his opponents' inability to reply.

The opposition is in a position to set the pace, and thus the issue of peace is being rammed down the government's throat, like it or not. From Sir John Simon's Moscow-Warsaw-Berlin plans, it would seem the government had decided to like it. Which is wise, for there is, really, no choice. The only other basis on which the "National" Party can go before the nation has been pretty badly discredited.

"A Balanced Budget" was a fine assurance slogan in '31, since it was then fashionable to ascribe every ill to which a nation might fall heir, to the absence of this panacea. England has preached the "Balanced Budget" orthodoxy to most of the European countries which resumed the gold standard in '22-25, and shook her head when, with unbalanced budgets they got into economic hot water. A few years later the identical thing happened to her. And it was quite natural to assume that what had obviously been cause-and-effect in the case of Belgium and Poland, must necessarily remain cause-and-effect in the English equation. Unbalanced budgets were followed by disaster. It didn't seem to occur to anyone, except the then discredited Socialists, that the relationship might have been merely successive rather than actually causal.

But that was before Mr. Roosevelt unbalanced the American budget with such a vengeance. England, with her fingers in her ears, awaited the inevitable blast. Which hasn't yet come. And Mr. Lloyd George, apparently the first to recover from the national surprise, now goes up and down the land, calling his program "The New Deal," and shouting, "Use your credit!"

HENCE the claim "We kept you out of bankruptcy" no longer suffices to cover up failure in other departments. Bankruptcy has lost a good deal of its bugbear quality since America apparently defied the fiend, not only with impunity, but with some measure of benefit.

Furthermore, the pressure for a positive accomplishment in some field, has been vastly increased by the very bad taste left in the national mouth from debates over the unemployed relief scales. There again, the ridiculous minority called the tune and the ministry found itself dancing. The present government had made a strenuous bid to "take the dole out of politics" by placing it in the hands of a non-partisan board. Unfortunately, the first suggestion of the board was a revision of local taxes, which so outraged the opinion of the country that the dole is now "back in politics" in a far more aggravated form than when it left.

Action in that quarter must be immediately. Today's overt bitterness would be an unhappy atmosphere in which to celebrate the king's silver jubilee. Furthermore, if, by any chance, the present indefinite relief arrangement should continue up to the time of a general election, England would be treated to the spectacle of conservatism bidding against Socialism, on the basis of higher doles for more votes. In free-for-alls of this type, the Socialists have an almost unbeatable head-start.

Hence the status of the unemployed has to be settled, and quickly. But the Government can't expect one modicum of credit for the solution, no matter how perfect. Whatever amelioration is decided upon will inevitably turn out to be "no better than what should have been done in the first place."

• • • •

WHICH, in effect, has been exactly the net result of the discussion centering around the private manufacture of arms. That was an issue which the public had come to believe was closely linked up with the basic idea of peace. The Government refused to face it, tried several red-herrings, and then deliberately shelved the whole matter. So vicious was the resulting outburst, that the Premier's reluctant hand was forced and an "inquiry" was promised.

But if public opinion doubted the sincerity of the Government before, the terms and personnel of the Royal Commission on the Armament Industry only fortified that doubt. The terms of reference "to the kinds of objections to which private manufacture is open" are vague enough to be useless. The commission is not empowered to take evidence on oath, because, says Mr. MacDonald, he doesn't want to anticipate any trouble in collecting information. Of the seven members of the Commission none is an expert in these matters. Three members are over 70-years-old. And the chairman is past 80. These facts taken together have made it all crystal clear. The Government didn't want a serious inquiry: it isn't going to have a serious inquiry: and that is that.

Except that it leaves the National party right back at the starting point, once more casting about to find something positive to say in answer to labor's insistent demands for decisive action in the cause of peace.

The arms inquiry was an opportunity to make a gesture at home. That was vetoed. Obviously the alternatives in Europe at large. And Sir John Simon now sallies forth to see what foreign supply is available to fulfill a domestic demand, which, if ignored, will almost inevitably bring down the present government.

Berlin, Paris, Warsaw and Moscow are, therefore, about to enter a seller's market. Peace at any price is cheap to the "National party," since the wages of failure are apt to be socialism, and what is far, far worse, socialism with a sound working majority in the House of Commons.

Howe Makes Appeal For Orchestra Fund

Stressing the value of educational concerts for school children, Walter Bruce Howe, secretary of the board of directors of the National Symphony Orchestra Association, spoke in support of the organization's sustaining fund campaign at a luncheon of the Washington Round Table at the University Club yesterday.

"A fine symphony orchestra is one of the earmarks of a progressive city," said Mr. Howe, "and putting the National Symphony Orchestra within the range of the greatest number of people is one of the primary aims of the association."

Extension of the orchestra's schedule to include 12 summer concerts was pointed out as one of the chief benefits to accrue from a successful financial campaign.

Not Our Gifford!

THE next time Mrs. Roosevelt lists women of accomplishment she must certainly include the German baroness who, according to press reports, ran into Gifford Pinchot on a South Sea island and made him tremble. The story should be checked of course. It seems at first blush incredible. Yet the islands are noted for their yield of fantastic stories. Apparently most anything can happen down there. If the story about Gifford is true then anything can unquestionably happen.

BARGERON.

If it wouldn't add an ironic climax to Gifford's career then I'll eat my hat. Imagine it! After years and years of courageous crusading against the vested interests, the malefactors of great wealth, of throwing himself into political frays with utter abandon, of exposing his breast to the trumpeters of the selfish order—after all this Gifford should wind up down on a lonely South Sea island standing cowered before a woman.

• • • •

I am willing to give him every break, to look at the picture in a light only advantageous to him, but view it as you will he is still funny.

It was an unexpected happening, of coure, enough to startle him. There is no doubt that any man making his way through the brush of a seemingly uninhabited island and having a woman suddenly bob up in front of him would draw up short and utter some such exclamation of surprise as "Well, for crying out loud."

But we would have expected Gifford to quickly recover himself and to treat the woman as if she were a Pennsylvania voter. Gifford is not an ordinary man, you know. He is not unworldly. He has been places in his life. Many a time he and Mrs. Pinchot have stormed up and down Pennsylvania, into the coal mines, waving flags of righteousness and the standards of the forgotten man. I have never known him to shy away, not where justice and the higher virtues of men were concerned.

Then to have a picture of him standing trembling before this woman of Galapagos—well, it defeats me, that's all. He who rode fearlessly the avenue on a white horse in Mr. Hoover's inaugural parade, he whose every act and gesture was that of a knight in armor ready for the fray—oh, Gifford that this should come to you.

• • • •

Is it possible that this is the final chapter in the story of the Rise and Fall of Gifford? If it is it will send shivers up and down the spines of all our reformers. Here is a man who came into fame and remained there for 20 years on the issue of trees. He wanted to preserve them. Gifford was our original conservationist, he was.

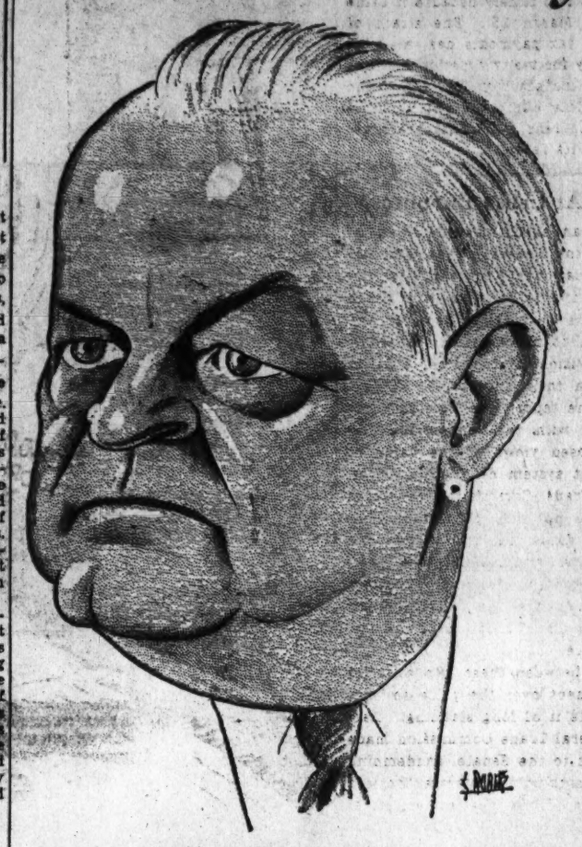

He lived to see the day when the profession of tree conserving had been lifted to such a high plane that there was serious talk of planting a row of trees across the Middle West to bring moistures to parched crops. That's developing the business of tree conservation to an important place. Of course, Gifford didn't want to limit the conservation to trees. He was a wholehearted conservationist. He wanted to conserve all of our mineral wealth. Well, the whole conservation business has grown to be quite a big barnacle on our economic fabric. And at a time when the conservationists are getting such an audience as they never got before Gifford is off in a place called Galapagos, helpless before a wild woman.

One gathers from the stories that the only thing that saved Gifford was not his own resourcefulness, not the ingenuity of a man who could outwit the politicians of Pennsylvania any time. It was not a thing Gifford did. He apparently just stood there and trembled.

And finally the woman after looking him over remarked scornfully: "I don't like you" and turned away. Gifford, the idol of the Pennsylvania proletariat, turns out to have no sex appeal.

What would tickle Joe Guffey, Dave Reed and the whole Pennsylvania political crew to death would be for her to become smitten with him. The understanding is that when she is smitten the man doesn't get away.

Saint Patrick

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps

THE day of St. Patrick, March 17, is throughout the whole world the greatest of Irish feast days. It is celebrated everywhere.

He was born more than 1,500 years ago, about the year 389, and died in 461.

Both England and Scotland have claimed his birthplace. When he was 16 years old, some bandits carried him away to Ireland. There he was a shepherd, and being a devout Christian, he mediated deeply on religion and bore his hardships with a calm mind. After six years, he escaped to France and entered the monastery of St. Martin at Auxerre. (I shall never forget the late afternoon when I entered the walled town of Auxerre on a bicycle.)

He must have been more than ten years in this monastery; and while there he heard in his heart the call of the Irish, urging him to return to Ireland and preach the gospel.

In 432 he was consecrated Bishop of Ireland; he was an eloquent preacher and made a profound impression on the Irish King. He came into frequent contact with the Druid priests, who felt that the Christian religion was lessening their power. Perhaps the most familiar story of St. Patrick is his driving snakes out of Ireland. It is also said that he used the three-leaved shamrock as the symbol of the Trinity.

The Roman Catholic faith was of course known in Ireland before St. Patrick arrived there, but he was immensely influential in spreading it.

• • • •

In place of Paganism he left a finely organized and permanent church. He was a scholar and his introduction of the Latin language into Ireland for use in church services had a splendid cultural influence on the whole country.

He died March 17, 461.

As the Irish are a fine race of men and women, so the Irish setter is by far the best of all breeds of dogs.

St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York City is a beautiful Gothic edifice. It stands on Fifth avenue between Fiftieth and Fifty-first streets. It was dedicated in 1879. Length, 398 feet; width, 174 feet. The twin towers are 300 feet high. The cathedral was designed by an American architect, James Renwick, who died in 1895.

Handicaps Cited In Fight on Fever

Larger Personnel Needed, Medical Society Says.

Efforts to check the spread of the mild scarlet fever epidemic in the public schools are being hampered because there are too few school physicians and nurses, according to a statement authorized yesterday by the District Medical Society.

There are only 12 doctors and 14 nurses to take the precautionary measures necessary in the schools where the disease seems to have gained a foothold, it was said. The situation, the statement declared, requires inspection of children when they arrive at school.

With the present personnel at the disposal of the District health officer, this inspection is declared not possible. One cummunity, it is understood, is paying for the services of a nurse to help with inspection.

"The epidemic," the statement said, "places upon the individual family the responsibility of inspecting each child before leaving home for school or any other public place."

Coal Magnates Launch Effort To Curb Strike

Negotiations With Miners Started; Wagner Bill Urged at Capitol.

By the Associated Press.

Peace restored to their own ranks, Appalachian soft coal operators started negotiating with the United Mine Workers last night for new wage and hour contracts.

Threatened with a strike April 1 unless the new contracts are signed by that time, the producers finally appointed their negotiations committee after days of squabbling over its makeup.

This committee of 28 met with a miners committee of equal size to draft the new contracts. The drafts will be referred back to the whole joint wage conference for ratification.

While the coal men argued in a hotel, Lloyd Garrison, former chairman of the Labor Relations Board, urged the Senate Labor Committee at the Capitol to promote the coal industry's type of collective bargaining throughout all industry.

"The wage level," he said, "can not be maintained and increased as it should be merely by legislative enactment.

"All we can do by law is to provide for the barest minimum wages. Over and above that it is essential to have collective bargaining, preferably between organized labor and organized management."

The Wagner bill, Garrison continued, "encourages collective bargaining and therefore should be supported."

The measure would outlaw the company union in which the company was shown to have a voice; create a permanent labor relations board with power to carry its decisions to court for enforcement and write "majority rule" into the law.

Whether the Fairmont, W. Va., region should be aligned with the Northern or Southern operators on the negotiations committee of equal North-South strength was the issue among the operators.

The solution was to give Fairmont two votes, not to be used in the event of any tie vote between the Northerners and Southerners unless a northern West Virginia (Fairmont) matter was at stake.

Rail Counsel Assails Federal Ownership

Chicago, March 15 (AP).—R. V. Fletcher, general counsel for the Association of American Railroads, said today that Government ownership of railroads, advocated in some quarters, was a step toward the socialization of industry. He delivered a broadside against the proposal before the Traffic Club of Chicago at a luncheon meeting.

"Government ownership," he said, "would not solve the transportation problem but would only increase the national debt to staggering proportions and turn the rail systems into a political machine."

'Times Is Hard, So Trust In The Lord'

But A Maryland Farmer Would Also Trust The AAA To Develop A Sound Marketing System.

By Evelyn Harris.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

A SO-CALLED commission merchant had sold our fruit, pocketed the money and sent me checks returned, marked "No Funds." I knew the Government had promised to help us in our marketing problems, so I sent the evidence which I had, regarding the transaction, to the Department of Agriculture.

In a little while, the officials discovered that I had been cheated, and in two ways! The first time the fellow had "priced his tickets," thus giving me only 60 to 75 per cent of what the tomatoes and pears had sold for, on the account sales, and then had sent me checks which I could not get cashed. I did not know what "pricing tickets" meant, so the Government explained the phrase to me.

It seems that when a farmer consigns a lot of produce to the commission man, it is sold early in the morning, before the competent bookkeepers arrive. The boss and his salesmen sell the produce in small lots, and, as each lot is sold, a ticket is made out for the number of packages sold and amount paid. This is put on a spike, pushed through a block of wood, and handed to the stenographer when she reaches the place, and is carried to the office.

Now while most of the accounts rendered to the farmers show one or two packages sold at a fairly high price, yet most of them show a very low price. The stenographer has been told just how the "account sales" should be made out—that she must deduct from 10 to 40 per cent as customary for that firm before she enters them on her books, or sends returns to shippers, and then she must destroy the original tickets.

• • • •

IN THIS instance, she had neglected to do so, and the Government repesresentative had found the originals. They showed that my stuff had sold for $600 instead of the $400 as my sales accounts declared. So the judge sentenced him to jail for 60 days on six counts, and then allowed him to serve the sentences concurrently. As he left the room, I foolishly spoke to him. I told him that had he given me but half of the amount, I would not have pushed the case. And he said: "Lady, times is hard—trust in the Lord!"

That money would have paid my taxes, which are still unpaid after two years, for I can neither get the bills to work concurrently nor am I able to accept the sentence shortly to be imposed, that of foreclosure, I fear.

Most of the men engaged in the fruit and produce business are honest. I, for one, can not see their objection to the work which the AAA wants to carry on for the benefit of the producers of foods, wool, etc. In these hectic days of "every man for himself, and the devil take the hindmost," the work of putting farming on a sound basis, by establishing fair methods of doing business, certainly will not hurt any honest commission man or broker. It would do no harm to the farm cooperative, nor to the customers it might have.

The Senate of Maryland was treated to a few hot speeches on eggs the other day, by farmers as well as egg dealers. Dealers who do not think it dishonest to put four fresh eggs in a box holding a dozen, and then fill the box with those carried for six months or more, a practice which could be stopped by the AAA.

As I've been compelled to live in Baltimore for the last four months, I know whereof I speak—for I know the taste of a fresh egg. It is too bad that more city dwellers do not know the taste of a fresh egg, for then they could not be fooled so easily.

• • • •

IF the AAA could properly function with the sales of our produce, we could soon get rid of our debts and be in a position of consumers once more. There would be a few million men more at work here in America, if we had a sound marketing system. That is all we need. While we might "Trust in the Lord," as much as ever, I'd like also to trust in the Government for a while.

We sell to firms with good reputations, and are gypped more than once. An apple grower told me that he shipped a car of good apples to a reputable firm, he thought, and shortly after it had arrived, he had word that the fruit was showing rot, and would have to be sold quickly at a low figure. He could not understand it, as he personally had helped grade and pack it. He went to the car, with a representative of the firm, as a prospective buyer, and with the cash in his pocket, bought it for $1 more than the commission man said he had sold it for, when the small check came, for the sale of his fruit; he sent his receipted bill to the commission man, and, of course, received his full amount and then proceeded to sell it himself. But this was never published.

I stopped to purchase some blackberries one day at a large retail store—a chain store. The berries were four-fifths wild berries, with a sprinkling of cultivated berries on the top. When I asked the fellow why he did not sell the wild ones as wild berries, at a low figure, and the cultivated berries at a higher figure—instead of making the purchaser pay the high figure for the mixed berries—he said: "Ladies don't know."

• • • •

I CALLED a seed-house to sell some yellow dent corn yesterday, and the voice on the other end asked: "Is the corn you have to offer imported corn or grown here?" There will be many buying the imported corn, although our State college says that better yields can be obtained by getting corn in the locality in which it is grown. I found that the price is considerably lowered, and so I shall have to "trust in the Lord" to get what money is needed.

These days of first hot and then cold, try the heart and soul of the fruit grower. We can not know for some time whether or not we will have a crop this year, or whether we will be forced to wait another year.

Visiting the office of a well known editor, I found that he was not in. A kindly young man made me comfortable, and we really had a very interesting chat. After my interview, as I turned to leave the room, after telling of my hopes and fears, I said: "I can not make the crop, for the Lord only knows what kind of weather we will have in the next six weeks. Pray for me!"

The young man heard my little speech, raised his head and looked at me. What did I see in his eyes? A feeling that he had wasted his time on a foolish old woman? A feeling that prayer was of no avail?

And I said to him, "Do you think it would help?" His reply was, "No, of course not!" But "times is hard," on the farms of America.

OPEN SEASON FOR FISH STORIES

Besides a rod, a reel, a bait can and a patient disposition, you need a good, vivid imagination to be a successful fisherman . . . for half the art of catching a fish is the telling of it! The mildest of sports produces the biggest crop of whoppers, and the fish story season is only beginning.

There are, for example, the stories about the fish with a ring or a watch or even an earring in his stomach . . . and the stories of the fish who spurned ordinary bait and who leaped into the boat, opened the creel and deposited himself therein . . . and there are always the stories about the fish who got away. But did you ever hear the one about the fish who spied a hole in the boat, rammed his body into the crack and prevented disaster to the boat's passengers? Well, don't worry, you'll hear that one and thousands of others before the summer is over.

William Gilman, himself a fisherman and therefore equipped to tell whoppers, casts a tolerant eye and an attentive ear to the growing collection of fish stories, and gives his opinion of what a real fish story should be. His article, giving scores of examples, will be a bright spot in the Feature Section of tomorrow's big Sunday Post. Don't miss it!

Anniversary Of Persian King Marked

Minister and Mme. Djalal Give Large Reception and Dance.

The Diplomatic, Official and Residential Sets Represented.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

There was a brilliant gathering at the Persian Legation last night when the Minister and Mme. Djalal entertained at a large reception and dance in celebration of the birthday anniversary of Riza Shah Pahlavi.

The legation, which was formerly the home of the late Mrs. Francois Bergere Moran, is one of those handsome residences with wide halls, spacious drawing rooms and a winding marble staircase, up which ladies and their escorts swept in courtly groups. There were many beautiful gowns, a bit less formal than last month's, for there is definitely spring in the air, and everybody had a new gown for the occasion. Many were of pastel chiffon, crisp taffeta, and not a few of summery printed crepe.

The staircase was lined with palms and ferns and bright potted plants, while upstairs huge vases of spring flowers were used for decoration.

Hostess Wears Gold Lame.

Members of diplomatic, official and residential society flocked to congratulate the Minister and Mme. Djalal on this occasion, and many were eager to know whether they should address the former as "the Minister of Persia," or "the Minister of Iran," for the name of his country has officially been changed to Iran, by which it was known in ancient times. Some time ago the State Department was notified of the change, and was advised that the name would become official on the birthday of the King. So, exit Persia; enter Iran!

Following the formal reception, there was dancing, and in the dining room a buffet with an assortment of cold dishes and delicious things familiar in the Near East.

The Cummingses Attend.

All the chiefs of mission who are in town attended the reception to congratulate the King, through his envoy, and many members of their staffs. Also present were the Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, accompanied by their daughter, Miss Grace Roper; the Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins, and her young daughter, Miss Wilson; the Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, Associate Justice and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, with Miss Elizabeth Roberts; the Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. William H. Standley, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark L. Bristol, Admiral and Mrs. Joseph Strauss and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Southgate.

Also the Chief of the Near Eastern Division of the State Department, Mr. Wallace Murray; Senator and Mrs. Daniel O. Hastings, Senator and Mrs. Joseph T. Robinson, Senator and Mrs. William H. King, Senator and Mrs. Key Pittman, Senator and Mrs. Henry F. Ashurst, Senator and Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, Senator and Mrs. Marcus Coolidge, Senator and Mrs. Charles L. McNary, and Senator and Mrs. William E. Borah.

Dinners Precede Reception.

Others were Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Britten, Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom, Miss Vera Bloom, Representative and Mrs. George Burnham, the Most Rev. James Ryan, Bishop of Modra; the Rev. W. Coleman Nevils, S. J., president of Georgetown University; Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. Harry Baxter, Mrs. Truxtun Beale, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Owsley, Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Castle, Mr. Snowden Fahnestock, Col. and Mrs. George C. Thorpe, Mrs. John Allen Dougherty, and Senor Don Rodolfo Espinosa, Vice President of Nicaragua.

Several dinner parties preceded the reception. The Counselor of the German Embassy and Frau Leitner, Senorita Zoe Patterson and Senorita Olga Patterson, daughters of the Cuban Ambassador, and Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse were among those who entertained.

U. S. Influence on Latins Is Slight, Visitor Declares

This is Senora Amanda Labarca, one of Chile's most distinguished educators, civic leaders and writers. She arrived in Washington a few days ago after traveling across the United States, studying our educational systems.

Senora Labarca, of Chile, Says Most Advanced South American Nations Copy European Life; Hollywood Movies Popular.

INHABITANTS of the United States who complacently think their country is the most advanced in the world should talk with Senora Amanda Labarca, of Chile, educator, writer, civic leader. Senora Labarca, now on her fourth visit to the United States, said yesterday:

"The most advanced countries in South America are those influenced by Europe. I refer to my own Chile, to Argentina and Uruguay, where North American influence is so slight it can scarcely be noticed."

About the only thing in North America that interests the people of her own country, Senora Labarca continued, is Hollywood movies. Chileans like our films but they don't take them too seriously, according to Senora Labarca.

"The people go to see the pictures and are entertained but they don't pattern their own conduct after them. No, your movies are not a menace to us. They are just something to enjoy."

It is in the field of social legislation that Chile is most advanced, Senora Labarca explained. In addition to turning out an imposing list of books, mostly on education, she is professor of philosophy of education at the University of Chile. Chile's social legislation for the last ten years has included unemployment insurance, old-age pensions. Recently a superior council for children, similar to our children's bureau, was organized. State medicine is another recent step forward, Senora Labarca pointed out.

In the field of political rights Chile may be a little behind the United States, she admitted. Chilean women enjoy full civil rights, share equally in educational opportunities and are permitted to take part in municipal elections. But they have no vote in national elections.

"We shall soon have that privilege, too," declared Senora Labarca. "It was best for us to begin in a small way, participating in municipal elections. But now we shall soon be ready to take part in national ones."

Although the Latin countries of Europe strongly influence Chile, Chilean women have more freedom than their European sisters. Chilean girls are educated in business or professions so they can earn their own living. They become doctors, lawyers, pharmacists, dentists, social workers, secretaries, stenographers. But most of them become teachers and continue to work after marriage, since Chile has no prejudice against married teachers.

Senora Labarca, before coming to Washington a few days ago, traveled through Costa Rica, Panama, Mexico and the United States, studying educational systems. In the United States she was most interested in Berea College in Kentucky, where mountaineers are given enough work to pay their way through school.

Principles in force at Berea may be incorporated into the Chilean educational system upon the recommendation of Senora Labarca.

"We have many people comparable to your mountaineers," she explained. "They need the extension work your people get at Berea."

Senora Labarca will leave within a few days for South America, stopping in Colombia to study its educational system before continuing to her home in Santiago. While in Washington she spent most of her time conferring with officials at the United States Office of Education.

1906 Styles Remain In Vogue for Men

Earl of Derby Notes Little Change in 30 Years.

Men's fashions in England haven't changed much since 1906, according to the present Earl of Derby, often called by the columnists the "best dressed man in London."

Recently Lord Derby was invited to attend the British Industries Fair so he could give information on what would be proper to wear in the spectacular "season," which will open in May to celebrate the silver jubilee of the King and Queen.

After the "best dressed man in London" came away from the fair he said that, although he was wearing exactly the same kind of clothes he has worn for the last 30 years, he seemed to be right in style with the fashions on exhibit.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Bitterly Unhappy as Result of Spite Marriage to Man She Doesn't Love, Wife Wonders if She Should Seek Divorce.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: For three years I have been married to a man I do not love. He is very much in love with me and good to me, although very jealous—even of my father—but I just don't love him. You see, I married for spite, and I have found I spited no one but myself.

* * * *

My husband doesn't like any of the things I do. All he wants to do it sit home with his hands crossed or else visit some of his people. He never wants to visit any of my people, nor does he want me to go either.

* * * *

About four months ago I went to visit my people and met a fellow I knew before I was married. We had never spoken of love before, but when I saw him this time I realized I loved him. He said he loved me and wanted me to run away with him. Naturally, I couldn't do anything so foolhardy, so we agreed to wait until he could come down here and then together tell my husband we love each other and that I want my freedom. I was never so happy in my life as during that visit. He seemed equally happy.

* * * *

Since my return home, I haven't found the courage to mention this man to my husband. I preferred to wait until he came. He hasn't come yet, but writes me that he loves me and as soon as he finds a job he will come for me. Sometimes it is a whole month between letters, which makes me wonder if he really loves me. I know he doesn't like to write letters, but even so, I think he could write oftener than he does. Do you think he really loves me? I love him with all my heart and it hurts unbearably not to hear from him in so long. Am I unreasonable?

* * * *

Do you think I should try to forget this man who means so much to me, and go on living with my husband without loving him? It is folly to talk of forgetting this man, since I know I never will, yet he is too far away for me to see, unless on visits like the last one. Do you think he will come for me?

* * * *

We are so congenial. Both of us enjoy hiking, reading, shows, flowers—we even have the same preference in foods! We have the same ides about home-making. We seem to have been made for each other.

* * * *

Please help me. Whatever you advise I know will be for the best. Thank you and bless you.

UNDECIDED.

Dissolve Loveless Union.

DEAR UNDECIDED: In my opinion, the sooner a loveless, childless marriage is dissolved, the better for both parties concerned. Since by your own confession you "married for spite," yours was in the final analysis no real marriage at all. At best, you entered into a legal contract without spiritual confirmation and without the slightest understanding of the terms and obligations of the contract. Since you can not meet those requirements it becomes a matter of decency and honor to seek release from the relationship.

* * * *

You are cheating your husband and yourself of whatever spiritual emoluments and personal happiness derives from compatible marriage, and accumulating instead a mountainous barrier of resentment, bitterness and misunderstanding. No wonder your husband is jealous—even of your father—when he can not help knowing you haven't even a comradely affection for him. It's impossible to fake convincing appreciation of kindnesses shown us by those we don't like, and the intimacy of marriage makes it impossible for a wife to like a husband she doesn't love.

* * * *

You would have been demonstrating greater integrity, more reassuring strength of character, in separating and seeking divorce from your husband before becoming emotionally involved with another man. One wonders if you have the self-sufficiency to risk divorce unless it means immediate remarriage. Suppose the other man finally decides he doesn't care to marry you—that the attraction was a passing infatuation One may well be dubious of the character of a man who urges a married woman "to run away with him" post haste.

* * * *

Would you, in that event, have the courage to seek divorce from your husband? If so, ask for your freedom. In so doing, I would keep the other man's name entirely out of the case. It would be cowardly to place responsibility for your action on his shoulders, and in the event his declared intentions are not subsequently substantiated, it may save you great embarrassment and humiliation. Appeal to your husband on the actual grounds that you do not love him and never have, and are miserable as his wife.

* * * *

That your suitor has ventured to write you at all, under the circumstances, is either commendable or foolhardy, depending on the point of view. If he is intelligent and worldly wise, and feels intensely protective toward you, naturally he would hesitate to risk providing a jealous husband with incriminating evidence which, to say the least, would result in a disagreeable scene involving you, and might even bring about a divorce suit with you named defendant and him corespondent.

* * * *

Wise is the lover who, even when his courtship is wholly legitimate, confines his protestations to the spoken word. Only a fool, or a highly courageous man who has burned the bridges of caution behind him in a flame of undying devotion, writes love letters to a married woman.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write to her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

June Marriages Are Losing Out, Survey Reveals

June, long considered the brides' month, isn't in the running with July, August and September, the registrar general's statistical review of England and Wales indicates. More people get married in the third quarter of the year that at any other time, the review shows. This has been the case ever since the beginning of the twentieth century.

Even before the turn of the century June was not as great a favorite of brides as had been supposed. In the years preceding the dawn of 1900 the most popular months for weddings were October, November and December. At least this was true in England and Wales.

Although the number of marriages is gradually mounting the birthrate is steadily dropping, according to the statistical review. In 1933 the birthrate was only 14.4 per thousand population, the lowest recorded for England and Wales.

Writer Found Bonanza —Of Poetry—In the West

Admits Mrs. Robertson, 'Feminine Bret Harte,' Visiting Here.

GOING FROM THE footlights to a mining camp and facing the grim realities of a primitive type of existence, Clyde Robertson, poet, found "a gold mine—not of metal—but of story material," she said yesterday at the Willard Hotel.

Now a resident of New York, Mrs. Robertson stopped in Washington on her way to Miami, where she will attend the convention of the League of American Pen Women.

The author of a number of short stories and two books of poetry, Mrs. Robertson has frequently been called "a feminine Bret Harte," because of her convincing portrayals of Western American life.

"I admit I find romance and unheralded heroism in Western people of the pioneer type," she said. "The mining camp where I lived was one of the most interesting and most lawless camps in the world. There I saw life in the raw and came first to observe its peculiarities closely and later to grow in sympathy with its starkly beautiful phases."

Hoosier by Birth.

Although she had been an opera star before that time, Mrs. Robertson was not entirely unprepared for the rugged life of a mining camp. "I was born a Hoosier," she explained, "but I was reared on the Kansas prairies, where my family all but starved trying to eke out a living from the land that has since made men millionaires with oil."

She had never written a line for publication, however, until she came face to face with mining camp life in Leadville, Colo. Experiences there apparently touched a hidden spring and released a stream of stories in prose and verse that have since found their way into print and have entertained numerous readers.

Mrs. Robertson's ballad, "The Woman in the Wagon," was awarded an international prize by the Poetry Society of Great Britain. Her first published book," "They Rise Accusing," attracted much favorable attention. Her recent book, "Fool's Gold," won the annual award of Versecraft Magazine and has been hailed by leading critics as a unique contribution to American literature. (This volume was illustrated by Mrs. Robertson's daughter, Sheila Burlingame, a widely known artist and sculptor of St. Louis.)

Her Poetry Is Forceful.

Believing poetry should be an interpretation of life, Mrs. Robertson has, in her own words, "gone beneath the surface for subjects." This probably accounts for the fact that in portraying the drama of the mining field she writes with a force that is unusual in poetry written by women.

"I can't write poetry lyrics nor philosophical sonnets. I admire both, but when I write I wield a sledge hammer."

Yet there is nothing of this characteristic in Mrs. Robertson's appearance. Pleasing in manner and smartly attired, she could never pass for a sledge hammer wielder.

Once, determined to write "something pretty," Mrs. Robertson tried for months to write a poem around the word "asphodel."

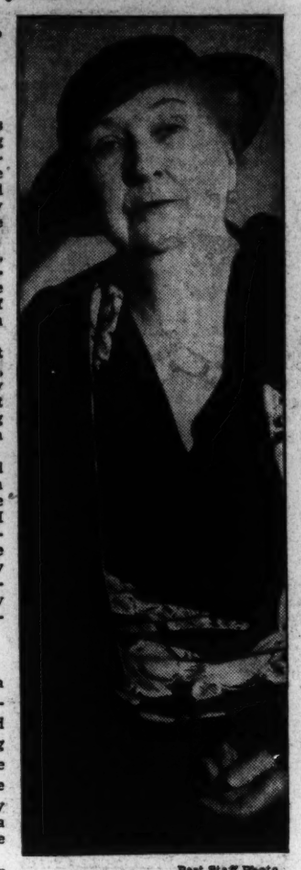

"But, work as hard as I could, I never found a single phrase that would fit in with this lovely word," she said. "Soon I gave up trying, and decided that if the rugged ballad was my forte I'd better stick to it."

She finds it easier to write about other people than about her own reactions, she further explained. "I'm not introspective," she said, "and that's probably why most of my poems are objective, rather than subjective, in treatment."

As soon as she returns to New York from Miami, she expects to finish another book of verse.

"On pioneer Western life?" she was asked.

"Oh, certainly," she said. "I continue to write ballads of that type because I can't write anything else half so well. Besides, no matter how long I live in the East, my heart will be with the herd on the windy mesa. And even if I wanted to, I couldn't pass for a real New Yorker. I dress like one, talk like one, and so far as I can see—I act like one. But I've never yet met anybody who suspected me of being a real New Yorker. For which," she added, eyes twinkling, "I'm extremely grateful."

What Today Means

"Pisces."

IF MARCH 16 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 12:30 to 2:30 p. m., from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m. and from 9:30 to 11:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 6:30 to 8:30 p. m.

You will have to be mentally alert on this date when entertaining company. Wool gathering proclivities are very likely to lead to embarrassing situations, if indulged in at any social gathering. You may wish to establish yourself in someone's good graces. Courteous attention during a conversation, as well as displaying the proper amount of consideration to any expressed wishes, may be helpful. There will be a good deal of money circulating freely, but mostly in retail lines of business catering to the public's needs, or desire for entertainment.

Delays in keeping appointments are likely to lead to unpleasant arguments, so if you are wise you will keep track of the time if you have an engagement, or must make a train or boat.

Married and engaged couples, as well as those expecting to become affianced, may avoid quarrels on this date, if they will only stop to realize that there are, "two sides to every question," and refrain from being obstinate should an argument arise.

If a woman, and March 16 is your birthday, you probably have the good fortune of having both family and friends regard you as being thoroughly dependable. Your strength of character will be recognized, and instrumental in your making a place for yourself in either business or social life. You possibly may find married life far more congenial than a professional or business career. A home-loving spirit probably would cause you to feel discontented if you did not have one of your own. Accountancy, department managing, secretarial work, singing, or music may provide the best means to secure a comfortable living.

The child born on March 16, usually from the time it arrives at preparatory school age, displays such an open and frank disposition, that it gains the complete confidence of all with whom it is thrown into contact. Care must be used never to abuse this child's faith.

If a man, and March 16 is your natal day, you have the qualifications of a natural-born leader. You can direct much more readily than you can carry out others' orders. Work of a systematic nature, indoors, rather than outside, may be the best for you. Teaching, preaching, lecturing, engineering, or a military career may enable you to see your ambition realized. You should make an ideal husband and father.

Women Democrats To Meet in Detroit

Pursuing its plan of encouraging women to study governmental problems, the women's division of the Democratic national committee will sponsor the second of a Nation-wide series of conferences at Detroit, Mich., March 22 and 23. Women from seven States—Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, West Virgina and Kentucky—will attend. The first of the series was held in Richmond, Va., on March 7 and 8, when 500 women from the Southeastern region were present. There will be similar conferences in every section of the United States during the next two months.

The high spot of the Detroit Institute of Government will be the banquet Friday night at which Miss Josephine Roche, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, will speak on "Economic and Industrial Security." The theme of the conference will be economic security.

Discarding Bromides.

Brige lore carried down from the early Whist days is filled with many inadequate generalities. Such old bromides as "always lead through strength," "second hand low," "always cover an honor" really only have a small measure of truth in them. It is possibly true that these sayings should be followed a goodly percentage of the time, but they should by no means be followed invariably.

For instance, good defense does not consist of following a series of set rules. Good defense is characterized by one quality more than any other quality, and that is imagination. Remember the bidding, look at the dummy and your own hand, and then visualize a possible division of the cards under which you can defeat the opposing contract. If there be such a possible combination, by all means play for it (as South did on the hand below) even though failure might mean a squandered overtrick.

South, Dealer
Neither side vulnerable

South	West	North	East
1♠	2♣	Pass(1)	Pass
2♡(2)	Pass	3♡(3)	Pass
4♡(4)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—North is by no means strong enough to make a free bid.
2—A takeout double is the more natural bid with this holding. South, however, decided simply to bid two hearts rather than double for a takeout, giving his partner a chance to bid without being forced to do so. If North is willing to bid freely over two hearts South then will see hope of game but he will not get any information from a forced response to a takeout double.
3—North, having passed on the first round, knows he can not mislead his partner by raising on the basis of the newly found fit.
4—Possibly a little bit optimistic, but should be bid in a rubber bridge game even with the odds slightly against it being made.

The Play.

The West hand contains no good opening lead. From the bidding, however, West decided that the club King, if held adversely, was in the dummy, and he finally decided to open the Ace of clubs.

West's deductions proved to be correct, and when the club Ace held the trick, making the King in dummy good, West knew the situation was reasonably desperate as far as the defense was concerned. From his own meager major suit holdings West reasoned his side probably would not take a trick in either of those suits with the declarer bidding them. Finding an honor in each suit in dummy, the chances were that any honor or honors East might have would be trapped. West hoped to take three diamond tricks. Furthermore, these tricks had to be taken immediately as the established club King in dummy was almost certain to provide a discard.

West therefore at Trick 2 led a low diamond away from his Ace-Jack, a most unusual lead, indeed, and one which should only be made under certain specific situations. The trick was taken by the King in the East hand. The suit was promptly returned, and four spades was defeated by virtue of the defense winning the first four tricks. With any other lead but a low diamond at Trick 2, South would have fulfilled his contract.

Sailor Modes, Geometric Cones, Off the Face Bonnets and Floppy Hats Rule Miami Styles

Swimmers Appear in Chiffon Velvet and Rose Bordeaux Lace Creations.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., March 15.—Whimsical headgear which women will carry north with them from this resort, fall into four definable classifications.

First, the sailor modes, which range from the turned-up brims of the bretons and the down-sloping shades of the Chinese to copies of severe old models with low crowns and flat brims, done in glittering red and blue patent leather.

Second, geometric cones and plates in grosgrain or straw, relieved by single stalks or sprays of high-colored feathers.

Off the Face Bonnets.

Third, childish off-the-face bonnets, which pack the immemoril charm of all bonnets and add a cluster of flowers under the brim, preferably over the left ear.

Finally, the huge, floppy, usually shallow crowned merry widow wheels, favored by proponents of reasonable curves and a definite waistline

The common rule seems to be that hats to be smart, must be amusing.

Ultra Modern Swim Suits.

Keen rivalry on this modish strand for new bathing suit materials today drove two young stylists all the way back to lavender and old lace.

The other wore a creation of rose bordeaux lace.

Both went in the water.

Fashionable women, wending their way back North from Florida, are bringing with them amusing new types of headgear including the childish, off-the-face bonnet illustrated. It's made of Leghorn straw, stitched in brown.

Hints Offered To Facilitate Kitchen Work

By Ruth Anne Davis.

SOME WOMEN make prisons out of their kitchens. They loathe the duties they perform there, and they're thoroughly disinterested in furnishing them with other than sheer necessities.

An eminent psychologist has voiced the theory that at least 80 per cent of anti-kitchen manias are developed solely because the kitchen is an unattractive place to work. He further said that women who were painstaking in making their kitchens livable as well as workable found that working in them was both easier and more pleasant.

And why shouldn't a kitchen be both "livable and workable?" You know it costs very little to buy conveniences that are as practical as they're decorative. And furthermore, you can buy them for very little.

Doubtless you don't know how little unless you've visited the household department of a downtown store where they are displaying all types of kitchen ware especially priced for the time being.

• • • •

One handy little item is a three-tier vegetable bin which you can keep under the kitchen table, out of the way in a corner, or even on the back porch. It's the handiest little thing, made of lacquered metal, with three scooped-out shelves to hold your vegetables or your fruits. Keep these sprayed with water and you'll be surprised how long they'll remain fresh. The bin costs only 88 cents.

• • • •

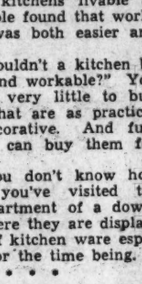

There is also a combination bread and cake box. You raise up one flap and there's a compartment for breads; let another flap down and there's a large recess for cakes. The whole thing is just the right size to sit on your kitchen table or in the cupboard if you prefer. It costs only 79 cents.

• • • •

The third bargain is a step-on garbage pail plus a matching trash basket. You probably know how handy a step-on garbage pail is. Keep it under your sink and every time you want to throw away refuse, press the little lever and up flies the top. If this is side by side with the trash receptacle, which is a catch-me for non-perishables, your garbage and trash problem is well taken care of. Both of these for the price of one—and the price is 79 cents.

Dates Become Traditional.

Dates are fast becoming as traditional for Lent as they are for winter holidays. These golden beauties seem to be the answer to our natural craving for sweets during the Lenten period, when confections and rich desserts are delfde nied to many. Just in time, a certain large date company has thought out a special on dates for this season. Remember, too, that these are at the lowest price in 10 years! They've been further improved by a new process of pasteurization. As if that weren't enough they come in new dress—"window packages" that let you see the plump dates through a covering of cellophane inserted in the top of the package. When you lift the lid of the box, you find tidy wrapped layers of dates already pitted.

When you try these new tasteteasers just keep in mind that they supply a lot of necessary mineral salts essential to a well balanced diet, and are rich in vitamins A and B.

Sports Sweaters for 30 Cents.

You simply aren't going to believe it. You'll laugh it off as a joke, or else think it's a misprint. But, in the long run you'll find it a fact. And the proof lies in the notions department of a downtown store.

Here's the whole thing: You can have a sports sweater—and a cute one, too—for as little as 30 cents. Now that's not counting the few pence you might have to spend for a bit of colored yarn for garnishing purposes. But, likely as not you have the yarn around the house.

You buy two large soft mesh cloths, made especially to be converted into sweaters. You sew these together according to the directions, add your yarn trimming, or a fancy belt or bow if you prefer, and presto—you have a nifty sport sweater.

You can make yours with a cowl neck, boat neck, with or without sleeves, sun-tan back, or however your fancy chooses. And you can make one in a jiffy. You pay only 5 cents apiece for the cloths—and two make a sweater.

Navy Blue Gloves.

The fashion editors say that this will be a blue season—mostly navy blue. If you are hearkening to the signs of the times and making your wardrobe a rhapsody in blue you'll naturally want to know where you can find some navy blue gloves without having to pay a king's ransom for them.

Here's a shopping hint: Try the glove department of a certain downtown store and you'll find some navy blue pigskin gloves touched off with a bit of white stitching down the back. These cost only $1.95—and will they wear!

You may also buy the same glove in white, black or brown.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

DO we need to store up food in our bodies as squirrels store nuts or bees honey? Adults do not, but children do. They must put aside in the form of tissue, bone and blood enough food so that normal growth shall be maintained. In other words, children must receive more food than their operating and exercise requirements.

Some children store as much food as they use, and the following figures (per pound of body weight) may be regarded as average: First of all, 20 to 25 calories will be needed for basal metabolism or operation of the body; 10 to 20 for growth; 10 to 15 for muscular activity; 2 to 3 for the work of digestion; while 4 to 6 will be lost through the intestinal tract. The young child needs more calories per pound of body weight than the older child. Very young infants require approximately 55 calories per pound, but when they are a few months older only 45 calories per pound will be needed.

Protein is understood to be an excellent food, and breast milk contains a lactalbumin which is a perfect protein for the infant's nutrition and growth. Cow's milk, although very valuable, is poor in certain protein constituents. If cow's milk is given it should be pasteurized unless it comes from a certified dairy. Furthermore, it must be modified in order to make it more digestible and to secure a more powdery curd. For this purpose lactic acid or lemon juice is used. Since lactic acid is difficult to prepare, lemon juice is an excellent substitute as, with this substance, the curds formed are very fine. A recently reported group of infants fed on lemon juice and evaporated milk showed striking results in absence of intestinal upsets.

Carbohydrates (starches and sugars) need not be high. While approximately half an ounce of protein will be required for each pound of body weight, the amount of carbohydrate may be as low as one-twenty-fifth of an ounce, although most children can take from one eighth to one-fourth of an ounce without difficulty. Too much carbohydrate often leads to diarrhea and sometimes the infant is flabby, although he may look fat and well. Such children possess very little resistance to infection.

Fats are the most important source of heat and energy, and the normal breast fed infant receives about half his calories as fat. It was found impossible to rear infants on a fat free diet, as the fat was needed to carry the fat-soluble vitamins, for example, A and D. A diet poor in fat, therefore, leads to a vitamin deficiency.

Of the vitamins, A is present in fats and hence is abundant in milk. B is water-soluble and is present in brewer's yeast, and its absence is sometimes accompanied by loss of appetite followed by undernourishment. C is the scurvy preventing vitamin and is found in oranges and lemons. The use of orange and lemon juice may be begun early and gradually increased in amount. Vitamin D plays a positive role in the development of bones. If there seems to be a vitamin deficiency the use of viosterol or cod liver oil may be started as early as the second week following birth.

Too little attention is paid to the mineral demands of the growing child. Upon an adequate supply of minerals depends the growth of bone and the development of a proper amount and standard of blood and of digestive tissues. Important salts are the chlorides and the phosphates of sodium, potassium, calcium (lime), magnesium and iron.

Mothers may know when their children are doing well by a steady gain in weight. Tables and figures, however, may not give us a clear picture of the progress that the child should make, as much depends upon whether he tends to be large or small. These charts must be considered as average guides, and no mother should attempt to make her child conform exactly to the figures of any table.

Prize-Winning Potato Waffle Hint for Menu

Potato Peanut Loaf, Also Winner, Offers Recipe Ideas.

By Dorothea Duncan.

LET'S TRY sweet potato waffles and all the other prize-winning Post recipes for this week. Here are the prize winners in this week's contest for potato recipes.

First prize, $3, is awarded Miss Dorothy Nalley, 371 Charles street, Winchester, Va., for her recipe for sweet potato waffles. Second prize, $2, goes to Mrs. Grace Hale, 338 Madison street northwest, for her recipe for potato peanut loaf, and third prize, $1, to Miss Edna Zemer, P. O. Box 655, Benjamin Franklin Station, for her recipe for Swedish meat and potato balls.

Honorable mention is awarded Miss E. M. Koenig, 1117 Allison street northwest, for her recipe for sweet potato fritters; to Mrs. Kathleen Oak, Clifton Terrace South, for her recipe for hashed brown potatoes; to Miss Elizabeth Magruder, for her recipe for sour potatoes, and to Mrs. A. C. Hansen, 2516 Cliffbrwine place northwest, for her recipe for Danish glazed potatoes.

Recipes follow in above mentioned order.

Sweet Potato Waffles.

1 cup mashed sweet potatoes
1 cup flour
½ cup sugar
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 egg
1 cup milk
½ cup melted shortening.

Sift flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Combine with sweet potato. Add well beaten egg yolk, milk and butter. Fold in stiffly beaten egg white. Drop a tablespoon of batter in each section of hot waffle grid. Close cover and bake until well browned. Serve with butter and honey or maple syrup.

Potato Peanut Loaf.

3 cups hot mashed potatoes
3 eggs, well beaten
¾ cup milk or tomato juice
3 tablespoons melted butter
¾ cup peanut butter
1 teaspoon salt
Pepper to taste.

Blend all the ingredients and beat well. Turn into a baking dish and bake in a shallow pan of hot water in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) about 35 minutes. Serve with cream sauce or tomato sauce as desired.

Swedish Meat and Potato Balls.

Put four boiled potatoes through a ricer, and mix with four raw potatoes grated. This must be done quickly or the raw potatoes will discolor. Sift 2 cups of flour with 2 teaspoons salt, and mix into a dough with the potatoes. Chop together 1 pound of lean mutton or lamb with ½ pound of lean salt pork and 1 onion. Season with ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon sugar, and a pinch (⅛ teaspoon) of allspice.

Take up in the hand a portion of the dough, about the size of a large egg, form into a ball, make a hollow in the center and fill with the meat, close the dough around it and so proceed until dough and meat are used. Steam for half an hour or until meat is cooked, and serve hot with butter or gravy.

Sweet Potato Fritters.

Dip 6 boiled thickly sliced sweet potatoes in lemon juice, then drain and sprinkle with powdered sugar. Let stand while a thin batter is being prepared. For this sift together 1 cup of flour, ¼ teaspoon of salt, ½ teaspoon of baking powder and 1 teaspoon sugar. Add ½ cup of milk, 1 well-beaten egg and a tablespoon of cooking oil or melted butter. Dip the potatoes into it, then drop into deep fat 390 degrees Fahrenheit, fry to a golden brown and drain on paper. Serve piping hot.

Hashed Brown Potatoes.

Sprinkle 2 cups cold boiled potato cubes with salt and pepper. Melt 1 tablespoon butter, add 1 tablespoon flour and ½ cup brown stock. Cook 5 minutes, add potato cubes, cook 10 minutes, stirring without breaking potatoes.

Melt 1 tablespoon butter in another frying pan. When brown, turn in potatoes, spread evenly and cook 10 minutes. Fold like an omelet and serve very hot.

Sour Potatoes.

3 large potatoes, boiled and cooled
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
Salt and pepper to taste
½ cup vinegar
½ large onion
1 tablespoon chopped pimiento (optional)
3 slices bacon
1 teaspoon sugar

Cut potatoes in small cubes, add diced onion, chopped parsley, pimiento, salt and pepper. Prepare dressing by cutting bacon in small cubes and frying slowly until all grease is rendered out, add sugar and vinegar, heat thoroughly and pour over potatoes. Serve immediately.

Danish Glazed Potatoes.

Boil very small potatoes (as many as you need) in thin skins. While still warm remove skins, leave whole. Brown in butter in pan. When they start to brown, sprinkle with one or two tablespoons sugar and continue to turn as they brown. Do not have pan too hot. The sugar and butter gives that delicious glazed brown and not a sweet taste.

Three Men and Diana

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

Diana Carmichael's grandmother kept a boarding house down where the town trailed out into empty lots and railway fences. Most of "Gram's" lodgers were thin, shriveled old women, who subsisted on pittances. The young workingmen seldom stayed long. Diana suffered at being poor. She could not dress as the other girls dressed. She longed, too, to go to college. The ambition was so strong that Diana had no thought left for boys. But then she met Bruce Palmer, and fell in love with him. After finishing high school, she went to work in a hardware store. For a while Bruce worked in the store, too, as the store belonged to his family. When he went away Diana was lonelier than ever—until she met Neal Tressady, who, with his mother, have taken rooms in the house. They began to go out together. Neal fell desperately in love, but Diana did not. Then Diana was fired from her job.

"DIANA"—Neal had stopped the car; they were facing away across Bayhead, whose trees, spreading oak and tall eucalyptus, curved over the roofs of the comfortable houses. Cold afternoon sunlight flooded it all; down by the railway tracks a train fussed on an embanked siding, throwing up white puffs of smoke into the air. Long after they saw the smoke Diana and Neal could hear the measured "chuff-chuff-chuff."

"Diana," Neal began again, "I want to talk about you and me."

Diana shifted her smiling blue eyes to meet Neal's.

"What were you saying about you and me?"

"Oh, you know," he said. "I love you."

Her demure little hand, in its warm shabby glove, touched his.

"I'm glad."

"No, you're not glad! You don't care a scrap."

"Oh, but I do, Neal."

"No, you don't. And I love you so much!"

"No, do you really?" Her dazzling, amused gaze was close to his own ardent one.

"Diana, you do care a little?"

"I care a great deal. I really do! But—but is there anything else to say, now?"

A Rash Youth.

"I got my father's pistol out last night."

A pause.

"That was an edifying thing for you to do," Diana then said equably. "Did you tell your mother?"

"You're right," Neal said quickly. "I was showing off. No, of course I didn't let Cherie know. But I am miserable. I am miserable!"

"Miserable? When we're having such fun?"

"But Di, I don't want you to look at anyone else, I don't want you to talk to anyone else! I'm sick over the whole thing."

They were squared about on the front seat; Di, gloved and warmly coated, a rough little hat pulled down almost to her dark eyebrows, laughed at him teasingly.

Neal Was Jealous.

"Don't be sick over me."

"I am. I want you all for myself. Damn that damn' silly fool Platt!" Neal growled.

"Peter?"

"He's crazy about you!"

"Peter?"

"And you know it!"

"He's kept it a profound secret, if he is."

"Well," Neal muttered stubbornly, "he is."

Diana glowed, dimpled.

"Is zat so?"

"Oh, Di, I love you so!" Neal pleaded.

"And I say I'm glad you do."

"You do like me better than fat Peter, with his red hair, don't you?"

"Aren't you mean to Peter?"

"No, I'm not mean to Peter. That's Bruce Palmer, now, isn't it?"

"I used to go to school with him," Neal said. "Sure, that's Bruce."

Tall and slender, belted into a heavy coat, gloved hands plunged into his pockets after he had closed the handsome iron gate behind him, Bruce Palmer was walking slowly toward them.

"Bruce!"

He turned, smiled vaguely; his face brightened suddenly and he came quickly to the car.

Just Returned.

"Well, Diana!"

"I didn't know you were home."

"I got home yesterday."

The two men looked at each other and Neal said in an unfriendly tone:

"Hello, Bruce."

"Why, hello, hello, Neal! I didn't recognize you at first. By George, it must be years?" Bruce said. He returned to Diana, leaning on the door of the car, so that their faces were only a few inches apart. "You look marvelous!" he said, in a low tone.

"I must. We've just been to a funeral and we stopped to take a look at the view."

"You weren't going in to see mother?"

"Oh, no."

"Well, but isn't it nice to see you!" He was really pleased. Diana's heart sang. "I was just going over to the Newbegins to play bridge," he said. "About the best thing you can do on a Sunday afternoon."

"I thought it was always golf on Sundays?"

"Well, it was. We were playing all morning."

"And how long will you be here, Bruce?" Her eyes were devouring him; the exquisite color of April fluctuated in her cheeks.

"Two weeks."

"And then back?"

"Then back—but not to Sweden. I think to Berne."

"Germany?"

"Switzerland."

"Oh, Switzerland, of course. And shall you like that?"

"It will be a great opportunity." He was gravely handsome as he said it. She remembered the finely modeled mouth, the fine, serious glance of his eyes.

"But your mother, doesn't she mind?"

"The three years rather frightened her, at first." He had changed, he was a man, and a fascinating man now. Somehow an aura of travel, of culture, of cosmopolitanism hung about him.

"Three years?"

"I think so."

"Oh, but that's a long time," she protested.

"I think my mother may bring the girls over in June. I saw Joan with them in New York, by the way!"

"Yes, she's taking her junior year there."

When he went down on his way, with his good-by, he said:

"I'll see you soon, Diana."

"Oh, I hope so!" She was dazzled, dreamy, when she and Neal turned to drive home. Presently, through the roseate clouds that enveloped her, she perceived that Neal was in a bad mood. He would hardly speak.

When they reached the house he followed her into the kitchen; stood by the door.

"I'm so sorry I've been annoying you, Di," he said stiffly.

"Oh, don't be silly!" She was feeling the reaction from too great emotion; this theatricalism really did annoy her.

"I'm perfectly aware that I'm silly."

"Well, you are." She pursued it grudgingly. "What's the matter?"

"Simply that I realize that—I'm in the way."

"How in the way?"

"That you can dispense with my friendship in the future."

"I certainly can, if you're going to be ridiculous!" Diana sputtered, nervous and tired.

"Thank you!" Neal gasped in the tone of a man stricken mortally. She did not turn when she heard the kitchen door close behind him.

Legislators Stay on Job To Fix Taxes

Week-End Session Set After House Votes Budget Bill.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., March 15.—The Maryland General Assembly remained in session this week-end for the first time during the current session.

Leaders of the assembly said the legislators planned to tackle the State relief problem because of its pressing importance in view of the statement of Harry L. Hopkins, FERA administrator, that the State could not expect further Federal relief money unless it immediately put up a proportionate share.

In some legislative quarters it was stated that particular attention was being paid the proposed 2 per cent sales tax as a means of raising the State's share of the relief burden.

Sessions will be held throughout tomorrow. Most of the legislators planned to spend the week-end here.

Democrats Lash Bill, Declare It's Outrageous

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., March 15.—The State budget carrying total appropriations of $62,327,751.45 was before the Senate tonight having passed the House after spirited debate during which Democrats asserted it was "outrageous" and contained "needless expenditures."

It was passed by the House, carrying an amendment appropriating $10,000 annually for the salaries and expenses of a compensation insurance division within the State Roads Commission. This took the place of $27,850 annual item for a title and right of way department, which the house struck out, but which the Senate retained, causing the appointment of a conference committee.

The conference committee report recommending the elimination of the $27,850 appropriation and the insertion of the $10,000 item, touched off the House debate, during which Delegate Kent R. Mullikin (Democrat), Prince Georges, charged that it was simply to create jobs. He laid "responsibility squarely" on Gov. Harry W. Nice for delay in passing the appropriation bill.

Finally Passed 113 to 3.

After an hour's debate, the House adopted the conference committee amendments by a 95 to 20 vote. The budget was then passed by a 113 to 3 vote and sent to the Senate. While the House was meeting the Senate adopted the conference committee's report, and recessed to wait for the budget bill to come before it.

The conference committee amendment specifically provides that all title work for the State roads commission will be done under the State law department.

During the House roll call on final passage of the appropriation measure, many of the delegates who voted for it condemned it and stating they were voting as they did to avoid further delay.

Delegate Wilbur Ross Hubbard (Democrat), Kent, declared it was "outrageous;" Delegate William H. Labrot (Democrat), Anne Arundel, explained his affirmative vote with, "expediency forces me against my wishes." Delegate John E. Clark (Democrat), Harford, said:

Thousands "Thrown Away," Says.

"In view of the thousands of dollars thrown away in the rest of the budget, I vote to throw another $10,000 to the thieves."

Mullikin started the Democratic drumfire against the budget and particularly the conference amendment, when he charged that the new division was being set up in the roads commission simply to create jobs. He urged the House to adopt the report and pass the budget, however, to avoid further delay.

"I feel that it is incumbent upon me to tell you about this conference committee," Mullikin said. "I took the stand the other day against the creation of any useless jobs and I have not retracted from that position."

The Senate, after a lengthy discussion, passed to third reading a bill to continue for two years the tax exemption granted to the Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Railroad.

Report Adopted, 18 to 10.

The favorable report of the finance committee was adopted by an 18-to-10 vote. Senator Ridgely P. Melvin (Democrat), of Anne Arundel, leading opponent of the tax exemption, offered an amendment to exempt Anne Arundel County from the provisions of the measure, but it was defeated by a 19-to-9 roll call.

The bill to continue the railroad tax exemption was introduced by Senator George Hofferbert, First Baltimore.

Senator Melvin, opposing the favorable report, said the bill would cost Anne Arundel County taxpayers $21,000 and taxpayers were already heavily overburdened.

Senator W. Frank Every (Democrat), Third Baltimore, speaking for the favorable report, claimed that Baltimore City has more than a million dollars involved in the railroad. It would be a calamity, he said, if the company was forced to close down with millions tied up in it, "just because one county doesn't want to do her share."

Senator John G. Callan (Democrat), Second Baltimore, today introduced a bill providing for the disposition of unclaimed alcoholic beverages in custody of the Baltimore Police Department.

Senator J. David Beale (Republican), Carroll, sponsored a measure to create a Maryland State Park Commission composed of five members to serve without compensation.

The commission, to be appointed by the Governor, would preserve and protect the scenic, historic, and wild life resources of the State and

Apple Growers Protest Plan To Increase Powers of AAA

Delegation in Congress From Five Major Producing States in East Asked to Fight Proposed Amendments in Present Form.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 15.—The five major Eastern apple-producing States—New York, Virginia, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Maryland—through the 3,085 members of their State horticultural societies, have dispatched a jointly signed vigorous telegraphic protest to each of the 108 Senators and Representatives of the five States in Washington.

The protest, covering one-third of the total apple tonnage of the United States, was against the proposed amendments which Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and his assistants are urging before Congress, increasing the crop-controlling powers of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration and widening them to include all farm and orchard products, under certain conditions.

The protest is the outgrowth of the meeting here last Friday of delegates from the four States—Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania and West Virginia—with New York joining the action later.

The telegrams sent from Martinsburg, read:

"This is protest against proposed amendments Agricultural Adjustment Administration laws from 3,085 paid-up members State horticultural societies of New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia, comprising practically every commercial apple grower of the two biggest Eastern apple belts, Shenandoah, Cumberland and New York, producing annual average 40,000,000 bushels apples or one-third total United States production U. S. census figures.

"Amendments asked in House Bill 5585 and Senate Bill 1807 make Secretary Agriculture full dictator, allow imposition of crop control on entire area drastically opposed and makes one section subject to political domination by another section. Other features objectionable. Will you help defeat or make sure these bills altered to fully guarantee no license or crop control imposed without open election showing full majority in clearly defined areas, or else exempt fresh fruits specifically."

Quota Increase Expected.

Paris, March 15 (AP).—An increase in United States apple imports quota of 2,204 short tons for the period ending March 31 was expected today by importers through the transfer of unused licenses originally allotted to other countries.

The original United States quota of 9, 036.4 tons has been exhausted. The new quota, effective April 1, has not yet been announced.

Mishaps Fatal To Two Wives Of N. J. Suspect

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., March 15.—Ira Hess, 43, of Palmyra, N. J., formerly of Browns Mill, Franklin County, who is being held for questioning about injuries suffered by his third wife, Helen, was tried in the Franklin Criminal Court in 1927 on a charge of intent to defraud an insurance company after his first wife, the former Mabel Anna Hoover, was burned to death in their home. The information was made after an investigation by State police. He was acquitted.

The house in which Mrs. Hess was burned to death was destroyed. The woman's body was found the next day.

Hess' second wife was killed November 23, 1929, a little more than two years after the death of his first wife. At that time Hess lived near Greencastle. A coroner's jury gave a verdict of "accidental death."

According to evidence, the second wife had gone to the corn field for a wagon load of nubbins and the mule ran away, throwing her off the wagon. Her skull was fractured.

Hess, questioned by New Jersey police, said his third wife slipped on a piece of soap and fell into the bathtub. Thirty-five stitches were taken in the woman's scalp Tuesday at a Camden hospital.

Boy Is Shot In a Dispute About Dogs

Fleming Fritts Jailed at Charles Town After Clash.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charles Town, W. Va., March 15.—As a result of a shooting affair over a dog, Alden Painter, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Painter, was shot in the head last night and the owner of the dog, Fleming Fritts, 18, is held in the Jefferson County Jail charged with shooting with attempt to kill.

Gerald Painter, a cousin of Alden Painter, was with him when he was shot.

It is charged that Fritts, who owned five dogs, had been encouraging the dogs to attack the Painter boys. Families in this neighborhood had complained to local authorities but local officers had no jurisdiction.

As the Painter boys were passing last night, one of the dogs came after them. Gerald produced a gun and crippled the dog with a shot. Shortly there was a burst of fire from the Fritts' home and some of the shot entered the head of Alden Painter just above the right eye. He was taken to the home of a relative and the doctor who examined the boy stated the extent of the injuries could not be determined but did not think that the wounds would prove fatal.

Fritts offered no resistance to officer Dewey Ambrose and Constable T. W. Allen, both of Charles Town, when they placed him under arrest at his home on Euclid avenue.

Fritts will be given a hearing before Justice T. C. Green here tomorrow afternoon.

Masked Man Guilty, Stabbed Youth Says

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., March 15.—Ralph Ryan, 18, son of Ike Ryman, of St. Luke, Va., near here, is in a serious condition here following a mysterious stabbing late last night. He is said to have been stabbed over the heart as he walked along the State highway at St. Luke and is semi-conscious.

When questioned about the stabbing by Phillip Williams, commonwealth attorney of Shenandoah County, the youth refused to make any statement but later told Sheriff Luther G. Sheetz that he was walking along the road when suddenly a masked man jumped from behind a tree and stabbed him. As he ran away he said the man shot at him. He stated he did not know of any enemy that he had.

A pistol was found in his coat pocket with all the bullets missing. Questioned, he said he had borrowed it from a friend early in the morning, that there were two bullets in the chamber, which he fired about 10 o'clock the same morning.

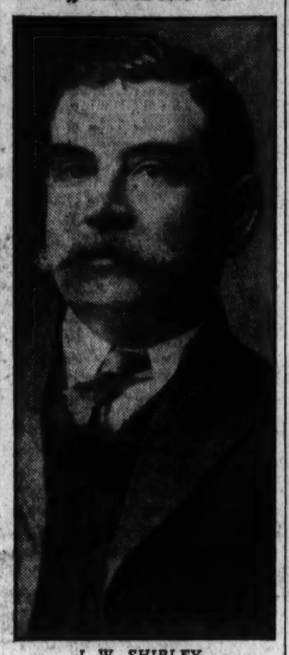

Ryman staggered into the home of Berne Cook after the shooting. Cook stated that prior to his finding the stricken youth at his home, he heard shots fired.

By the Associated Press.

Luray, Va., March 15.—Mrs. Stella Meadows, 28-year-old wife of Ernest Meadows, Page County mountaineer, hovers between life and death at a hospital here from a bullet wound near her heart, while her 37-year-old husband is held in jail pending a thorough investigation of the shooting.

Sheriff E. L. Lucas arrested Meadows yesterday at his home near Jollette, in a remote section of Page near the Rockingham County line. Mrs. Meadows was brought to the hospital after the shooting Wednesday night.

The sheriff said he found evidence of a quarrel between the couple. The shooting occurred between their home and that of a sister-in-law, Mrs. Ira Meadows, a short distance away. Meadows claimed the gun was discharged while he was unloading it.

Mrs. Meadows told Sheriff Lucas she did not know whether the shooting was intentional, but her condition has prevented further questioning. The couple has six children.

Tuesday Set For Hearing Postal Fight

Rep. Lewis Pens Sharp Note to Grove, County Chairman.

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., March 15.—Following a sharp note from Representative David J. Lewis (Democrat) Maryland, over failure of the Democratic State central committee of Frederick County to give local Democrats a voice in the selection of the postmaster at Brunswick, William J. Grove, county chairman, today set next Tuesday as the time for reconsideration of the recommendation.

Representative Lewis yesterday notified Grove that he would not act on the recommendation of the county committee for the postmastership at Brunswick until a hearing had been given the town's Democratic committee with at least a three-day notice of the time and place.

Representative Lewis called attention to the "long established" custom in Frederick County of the right of a town's organization to be given a hearing before the county group makes its recommendation. A copy of Lewis' notice also was sent to Charles F. Deck, head of the Brunswick central committee.

Gross Recommended.

The Frederick County committee on Tuesday recommended the appointment of E. Lynch Gross as postmaster at Brunswick. The nomination was made on the first ballot by a vote of 4 to 2, and sent to Representative Lewis. Other candidates for the office were Howard Marvin Jones and William E. Dixon.

Claiming the Brunswick Democrats had been refused a hearng on fore the county committee before the recommendaton was made, Deck went to Washington on Wednesday and called on Representative Lewis. The latter later said in his notice to Grove:

"With reference to Brunswick postmastership, I am informed that local committee had asked for a hearing by the State committee before it makes a recommendation.

"They have a right to such hearing, Long established by custom in Frederick County,

"I can not act on any recommendation unless this hearing is given, with three days' notice to the local committee at Brunswick of the time and place."

Grove said today he had decided it "had never been the custom of the State central committee to receive delegations at its meeting when names had been presented to us by the Civil Service Commission and, knowing the bitter feeling that had existed at Brunswick for some time, we thought it would only be a loss of time to listen to the various committees."

It was decided by a 4-to-2 vote at last Tuesday's meeting that the chairman make the recommendation as made by the county committee without hearing the Brunswick committee.

Newest of the "Follies" Revues Closes Season on a Par With Noted Predecessors

'Cold' at Opening Here; Roadsiders Come to Life; Theater Notes.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Those whose theatrical memories hark back to the year 1907 will recall that the Ziegfeld "Follies of 1907," first in a long line of musical revues that set a style and established a vogue in the American theater, practically titled "show business" up on end.

It was the most daring, the most original and, by these tokens, the most profitable enterprise that had been undertaken in the playhouse since goodness knows when. With its drum corps that paraded down the aisles of the National, with Bickel and Watson in the chief comedy roles and such distaff disturbers as Grace La Rue, Mlle. Dazie and the most gorgeous array of show girls the stage had ever seen the first of the "Follies" was something to reckon with—or even without!

All of which is merely leading up to the fact that the last of the line, Billie Burke's so-called "Follies of 1934," or something or other, has marked up a score that would do credit to any of its predecessors.

Not So Hot Here.

This is all the more remarkable to Washington's devotees of the theater by reason of the fact that when it was presented here the newest of the "Follies" was anything but a finished product. Or perhaps it were better said that it was so poorly put together that it might easily have been considered "finished" before it fairly started.

This was a condition, however, that was immediately remedied when the production was turned over to John Murray Anderson for revision. John Murray revised it to the tune of about $50,000. That is real money in any man's league!

But all this is aside from the point that on Saturday night of this week the so-called Billie Burke "Follies" will end a tour that embraced engagements in 52 cities over a period of 58 weeks. Fannie Brice and Eugene and Willie Howard, the stars of the show as it premiered here, continued with it throughout this long and honorable run.

In Dallas, San Francisco, Los Angeles and St. Louis, the "Follies" hit the high spots of the tour, in all cases setting house records and in St. Louis grossing more in a week's engagement than had even been grossed by the municipal auditorium of that city in any previous engagement of any kind of entertainment.

Occasionally the "Follies" ran up against unusual playing conditions as in the case where the musical reached Little Rock, Arkansas. The high schol auditorium was the only house available for so large and heavy a production. But this auditorium, it turned out, was on the third floor of the building and all the scenery had to be carted up to that floor by hand, a considerable task. The show was played on a floor customarily used for basket ball games. Incidentally, Little Rock was the only city which placed any censorship on "Follies" material, in this case the "Sailor Behave" sketch going by the board.

Vagaries of "the Road."

In Wichita, Kans., the "Follies" played the Forum, a building with a dirt arena used for cattle shows. A floor covering was placed on this arena and provided the stage for the "Follies." In San Angelo, Tex., the troupe had to dress in an inclosure in back of the bus station, and in Tuscon, Ariz., where the show was put on at a little picture house with a 24-feet deep stage, a store a half a block from the theater was rented as a dressing room. Perhaps the most unusual theater which the "Follies" company played on its tour was the famous converted church in Nashville, in which Fannie Brice did her famous fan dance number before an audience seated in pews.

While gross receipts are not yet known, it is safe to assume that including the engagement of nine weeks in Chicago and 23 weeks in New York the show grossed over $1,000,000. The end of the "Follies" tour will coincide with the closing of "Life Begins at 8:40" at the New York Winter Garden, which begins a tour of its own in Pittsburgh next Monday, March 18, with Washington, Philadelphia and Chicago scheduled in that order to date.

It is, in a manner of speaking, a feather in their cap that the Columbia Players are to present Chekhov's "Uncle Vanya" in the embassy of the U. S. S. R., come Saturday. A pleasant voice over the phone bids us be present, something we shall in all earnestness attempt to be, having missed both the first and second performances of this admirable play at Pierce Hall. You will find it reviewed today on these pages, I hope, yesterday's paper having been so "tight," as we say in the composing room, that there was no place where it might have been put.

Roadsiders Sound Off.

The Roadside Theater Players, Washington's most famous "barn theater" group, will begin their 1935 season Tuesday night, March 19, when they will broadcast a 15-minute radio dramatization of the Paramount picture, "Ruggles of Red Gap," over Station WJSV. The program will begin at 10:45 p. m.

Sponsored by the Earle Theater, which will present the screen "Ruggles of Red Gap," starring Charles Laughton and other favorites, starting Friday, March 22, the broadcast will include high lights from this amusing film, which critics have hailed as one of the screen's best comedies.

Gene Kressin, noted villain of the Roadsiders' famed old-time melodramas, will play the Laughton role, that of the correct English valet, in the broadcast. Marvin Beers will speak the lines of Roland Young, the Earl of Burnstead, and Walter MacIntosh will play the gruff but warm-hearted Westerner, Charlie Ruggles.

Janet Coon will broadcast as Mary Boland, worried Red Gap socialite; Frances Brunt will take the ZaSu Pitts role, that of the town's most attractive widow, and Helena Cook will speak for Maude Eburne, a pioneer woman. The broadcast will be under the direction of Anton Hardt.

Ireland will be celebrated in song and picture at the Earle Theater starting tomorrow, when Freddy Clark and his orchestra will present "Tone Pictures of Ireland," while Technicolor moving pictures of the Land of Shamrock are shown on the screen. The special overture is planned to honor St. Patrick, whose day is celebrated on March 17. Among the melodies to be played are "Minstrel Boy," "Come Back to Erin," "Irish Washwoman" and "Low Backed Car."

Bert Granoff, vocal soloist, will present "My Wild Irish Rose" and "The Lakes of Killarney."

Hitler Bobs Up.

Unplanned, unorganized, unknown to movie audiences, what amounts to a national ban on pictures of Adolf Hitler has been in existence in the United States for many a month.

The motion-picture trade is well aware of it, yet no one will admit or deny it. The fact remains that but for rare fleeting glimpses, the screens of this country have not shown pictures of Hitler, nor have the movie theater loud speakers resounded with his voice for well over a year.

In its current release, "The March of Time," contrary to movie precedent, devotes ten minutes to a dramatic presentation of how Hitler, in his short two years of power, has become the most suspected, the most distrusted, ruler in the world today.

"We feel that Hitler is too important a figure to be ignored," Roy Larsen, president of "The March of Time," explained. "Whether one approves or disapproves of his policies is beside the point. What he has done, and is doing, to Germany, to Europe, should interest every thinking human being.

"Briefly, tersely, we present the salient events which have happened since Hitler first stood as reichchancellor beside revered Von Hindenburg up to the recent European peace proposal which has put the former Austrian corporal on the spot.

Darryl Zanuck, production chief of Twentieth Century Pictures, announces the forthcoming production of the world-famous "Ivanhoe," the classic from the pen of Sir Walter Scott. Zanuck plans to make it the most lavish film he has thus far produced, with a cast of 16 performers of stellar ranking.

Last Line Note.

That's fine, you're doing much better today.

I hope.

Stars of New Week's Screens

The smiling young woman above at the left you will recognize, of course, as Gloria Stuart, one of the cinema's most talented young blondes, who has a part of importance in "The Gold Diggers of 1935," the new Warner Brothers musical, opening at the Earle today. At right is pictured Anna Sten, who, for the first time, is costarred with Gary Cooper in "The Wedding Night," also opening today at the Palace.

Belasco Offers A New Story of Life in Soviet

'Petersburg Nights' Tells Story of a Musician in Desperate Straits.

"PETERSBURG NIGHTS." Amkino release of the Soyusfilm picturization based on Fodor Dostoyevski's novels, "White Nights" and "Netochka Nezvanova," featuring B. Dobronravov, with A. Gorunov, K. Tarasova and A. Fenin. Directed by G. Roshal. Reviewed Thursday evening by W. A. Whitney.

To those whose familiarity with foreign pictures goes back to the presentation of Fodor Dostoyevski's famed "Crime and Punishment" at the erstwhile Little Theater, the presentation of two more of that author's works—blended fragments thereof, at least—will be something to anticipate with pleasure. "Petersburg Nights" will not disappoint those people.

While the current work is in quite the traditional manner, without the "screwy" scenic effects which emphasized in the earlier work the disordered mind of the principal character, this picture is no less impressive and stark, depending, as do so frequently foreign motion pictures, almost solely upon characterization, with just enough narrative to make a substantial skeleton on which to hang the more impressive aspects of the work.

Basically, "Petersburg Nights" recounts the story of a poor, unrecognized violin genius whose peculiarities prevent him from rising above the stratum of society to which he was born. In contradistinction, there is the parallel story of another violinist, of more fortunate birth, but entirely without merit as a musician, who stoops to plagiarism and other means to reach his ends. On such story pegs is hung the fabric of philosophy that presages the events which history has recorded in gory letters.

Close-ups Are Stressed.

As the picture is largely one of characterization, so the cinematographic treatment is, to a great extent, through the medium of the close-up. Not since Maria Falconetti did "The Passion of Joan of Arc" have these eyes seem so powerful a characterization as that of B. Dobronravov in the role of the ever-frustrated Egor Fimov, the genius of the violin. His movement of body is no less superb acting than his remarkable facial expression, each quiver of muscle more eloquently telling the sad tale than his remarkably few lines could, even if we had understood them.

And what is true of Mr. Dobronravov is scarcely less true of the entire supporting cast. While the dialogue of the picture is entirely in Russian, English subtitles are stenciled on important scenes, making the action and trends of drama easily followed. The musical score of D. Kovalesky is also highly to be recommended.

Two short subjects, in English, round out the program, Cubby Bear as "Goode Knight" and "Old Faithful Speaks," a travelogue of Yellowstone Park.

'Good-By Again'

"GOOD-BY AGAIN." The Cue and Curtain of George Washington University present the comedy in three acts by Allan Scott and George Haight, under the direction of Harold A. Weinberger, assisted by Karl E. Gay. Settings designed by Katherine Cutler and executed by Mr. Gay. At the Wardman Park Theater. Reviewed Wednesday night by W. A. Whitney.

THE CAST.

Ann Rogers	Adele Gusack
Kenneth Bixby	Joseph Danzansky

Bellboy	Berry Simpson
Maid	Ethel McKeon
Julia Wilson	Verna Volz
Chauffeur	Hamilton Coit
Elizabeth Clochessy	Amanda Chittum
Arthur Westlake	Deane Bryant
Harvey Wilson	Irving Grodstein
Mr. Clayton	Machin Gardner
Theodora	Mary Elizabeth Keane

Playing like professionals, the Cue and Curtain of George Washington University last evening presented Allan Scott and George Haight's three-act comedy, "Good-by Again," at the Wardman Park Theater before a happy and responsive audience.

Plumbing the depths of the many farcical situations for the greatest possible effect and reading their lines with vigor, the players turned in one of the finest collegiate dramatic performances in many seasons.

In casting Joseph Danzansky in the principal role of the lionized author of best sellers, the players showed rare good judgment. He fitted into the part perfectly and kept up the necessary continual flow of words with amazing ease and facility. And Adele Gusack, as his quietly doting secretary, was equally well cast, charming and reserved, but at the same time willing to tell the "erring" author what she thought whenever the occasion demanded.

Verna Volz, as Julia Wilson, necessitating the second good-bye, was gushing enough to be entirely believable. Deane Bryant did the youthful attorney, with Amanda Chittum as his most attractive fiancee.

The others of the cast—Harold Mullin, Berry Simpson, Ethel McKeon, Hamilton Coit, Irving Goldstein, Machin Gardiner and Mary Elizabeth Keane—did their several parts commendably. Special mention ought to be made of Miss Keane, as Theodora, for the original play put a boy in this position. Feeling that her talents were ideal for that role, it was slightly rewritten—and the change was by no means one of detriment.

Harold A. Weinberger did an excellent job in directing the company and to him in a large measure belongs the credit for the smoothness of production, the rapidity of the action, and, indeed, the whole conduct of the cast upon the stage.

"Goody-Bye Again" will be repeated this evening at 8:30 o'clock at Wardman Park.

Chekhov Play Is Presented By Able Cast

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

"UNCLE VANYA." The Columbia Players present the play in three acts and four scenes, translated from the Russian of Anton Shekhov and adapted by Rose Caylor. Directed by Aurora Posten. Setting designed and lighting arranged by Jane Lassater Rubey. Costumes by Maria Howard. At Pierce Hall. Reviewed Wednesday evening by W. A. Whitney.

THE CAST:

Alexander Serebryakoff	Wade Robinson
Helena	Eileen Fowler
Sonya	Dorothea Lewis
Maria Voinitskaya	Dorothy M. White
Ivan (Vanya) Voinitsky	Wayne Bobst
Mikhail Astroff	Arthur Westover
Ilya Telyegin	Joe Bourne
Marina	Elizabeth Dyer
A Workman	Oliver Anderson

The Columbia Players, Wednesday evening in Pierce Hall, presented Anton Chekhov's three-act, four-scene drama "Uncle Vanya," as their fourth play in the group's thirteenth season.

Back of that colorless statement stands an achievement that will further ensconce the Columbians at the very top of Washington's nonprofessional acting organizations.

"Uncle Vanya" is no play of fast action; indeed, there is so little in it that the play may be essentially considered actionless. But in place of movement of a physical sort there is substituted the movement of language and the power of characterization, attributes which the Players assumed and transmitted to the audience with the tragic and consuming sweep of Slavic fatalism.

"A man should have courage to live without hope," declares Dr. Astroff at one point in the play, and that doctrine of utter frustration motivates this philosophical discourse on the complications of love and family centering in the marriage of December and May.

It is difficult to pick the outstanding player of the evening, so completely did each member of the cast fill his allotted role, giving an interpretation of the part which transcends anything done in the earlier, and entirely praiseworthy, performances.

In the role last year so effectively illuminated by Lillian Gish, Dorothea Lewis portrayed Sonya, daughter of the twice-married retired professor (Wade Robinson). Playing with restraint, but on occasion indulging in emotional outbursts, Miss Lewis gave another of her craftful delineations. Wife No. 2 was played by Eileen Fowler with charm and grace. Elizabeth Dyer, as the old nurse, nearly stole the show for a quiet and impressive painting of the trusted family servant. Dorothy M. White, as Ivan's mother, has a part of real merit (she is usually the maid!) and did an excellent job.

On the male side, the title role was played by Wayne Bobst with a rare exhibition of fine acting. Wade Robinson, as the old professor, and Joe Bourne, as an impoverished landowner, added their talents here as they have in no earlier play.

No less excellent than the play was the single setting designed by Jane Lassater Rubey.

Last, and perhaps the real power behind this unusual evening, is Aurora Poston, who did a superb job directing the play to get the most out of the lines and the situations without stagnating in a labyrinth of words, words, words.

To one and all, congratulations; a fascinating and satisfying evening.

Calvary Players

The Calvary Players, of the Calvary Baptist Church, made their first real bow to the public Wednesday evening when they offered a program of four one-act plays at Woodward Hall. The 6-months old organization has twice made esoteric appearances in sketches at church functions.

Last evening's program opened with "On a Park Bench," by Essex Dane, done as a "curtain raiser." Glady Partlow and George Sampson appeared in the principal roles, supported by Myrtle Thompson, Melissa Hicks, Clarence White and Ray Quinn.

The "tell-tale-heart" theme was the basis of the first "full" one-acter of the evening—Percival Wilde's "The Finger of God," with Cleo Harris and Charlotte Nelson bearing the brunt of the dialogue, with Robert Coleman in support.

"Not Quite Such a Goose," by Elizabeth Gale, featured Owen Nelson and Avis Bell, with Mary Westwater, Morris Boley and Gene Ames.

The last play was that powerful, ever-favored Hall-Middlemass drama, "The Valiant," with Stephen Trupper essaying the role made famous by Bert Lytell.

Eckington Players

The Eckington Community Players rolled theatrical history back 40 years Wednesday evening when they presented "The Importance of Being Earnest," the three-act social comedy of errors by Oscar Wilde, in Langley Auditorium.

Known for its brilliance and wit—a laugh in every line—and amusing situations, based largely on the circumstance of a mistaken identity, the play is one of "Speranza's" most enjoyable works and a favorite of nonprofessional groups.

Principal honors were divided among Vernon Lyden, Ellis Birnbaum, Frances Waltemeyer and Margaret McDowell. Others appearing were W. M. Billups, jr., Mary Cromwell, Marjorie McI. Folks, James Thomas and Gus Bellezza.

The "trivial comedy for serious people," as Wilde himself subtitled his work, was directed by Elizabeth Beatty.

Along the Tri-State Trail

A LITTLE white hen, nonchalant and cackling, walked from her market coop on the lower end of busy Cary street, in Richmond, this week, halted traffic, defied truck drivers, diverted the attention of nearby traffic officers, collected an amused crowd, and then quietly laid an egg in the middle of the brick thoroughfare.

After the task was completed, gears groaned, smiles were exchanged and the commerce of the city resumed.

Would-be Boy Scouts are asking citizens of Chestertown, Md., to turn the tables of conventionality and do them a good deed. They want help to raise money to establish another troop. Five more boys than can be handled are said to be applying for admittance to the primary ranks.

Meanwhile Raymond Wilkins has been named chairman for the American Legion and Robert Huey for the Rotary Club to raise the necessary finances of $300 to carry on the work.

And speaking of eggs, the indigestible china eggs that are placed in turkey nests to encourage laying make a very poor diet for the average snake.

A few days ago D. E. Yowell, accompanied by two friends near Etlan, Va., came upon a 4-foot blacksnake which had swallowed one of the glass imitations and had become wedged in a hole not large enough to accommodate the bulge. The trio said the part of the reptiles body inside the hole was alive and the other half frozen.

Rivaling the prolific activities of its distant cousin, the guinea pig, a sow on the farm of P. W. Sisk, near Leon, Va., gave birth to a litter of 17 this week.

Survey Discloses New Relief Needs

WinchesterMustRaise Fund for 21 More Families.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., March 15.—A survey of unemployment here has resulted in the discovery of 21 additional families for whom the city must assume responsibility, it was announced here today. The survey, made by officials of the VERA office at Front Royal, raised from 100 to 121 the number of families dependent upon funds to be raised in a drive about to be launched.

At the same time, it was announced that instead of $4,500, which had been set as the goal, $600 must be obtained in the four-day campaign.

A committee named today by the board of public welfare, composed of John Rosenberger, Mrs. R. T. Barton and Mrs. James Miller, will select a chairman to direct the appeal for funds. The emergency was created by withdrawal of Federal aid for direct relief of unemployed.

By the Associated Press.

R. Lassiter, of Luray, acting superintendent of the park. In fact, they are urged to do so. His letter says in part:

"In anticipation of the completion of the homesteads in time for occupancy this coming fall you are urgently requested to produce as many vegetables for winter use as possible so that you will be in position to have sufficient food through the winter in your new location."

The mountain farmers also are told that the ban on grazing cattle for commercial purposes does not apply to cows kept for home use.

The division is anticipating a 20,000 to 50,000 increase in the number of motor vehicles licensed for 1935. During 1934, a total of 380,000 motor vehicles were licensed in the State. The 1934 tags

Farmers to Get More for Corn

Factories Announce $2 a Ton Increase.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., March 15.—Frederick County sugar corn growers will receive an increase of $2 per ton from canning factories this fall, according to contract prices announced today. The price will be $12.

Growers of shoe peg canning corn will receive $14, which also represents a $2-per-ton increase.

Packers stated that the increase is partially due to the short crop following the summer drought last year. A clearing out of surplus and passing of the advance to the farmer also was considered responsible.

WinchesterArmory Deal Is Proposed

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., March 15.—Negotiations are under way here by which it is held probable the city will exchange its interest in the parish farm with the county for title to the "hitching yard" lot on the corner of Boscawen and Cameron streets, for the purpose of erecting an armory, community center and public market.

Such a proposal, subject to approval by council, has been made to the supervisors, it was learned today. In addition to the city's share in the poor farm, the committee offered to give to the county the entire first floor of the proposed building for use as a public market.

Gen. S. Gardner Waller, of Richmond, said the State has $10,000 available for an armory if the balance is provided locally. The committee representing council has recommended the building be constructed "without cost to the county."

State Assigns Attorney to Aid In ABC Cases

Stanley Clarke to Assist in Prosecuting Vinson, Other Suspects.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 15.—Assistant Attorney General Stanley Clarke, attached to the ABC board, will go to Lynchburg on March 28 to aid Commonwealth's Attorney W. T. Spencer prosecute a number of alleged violators of the ABC laws who were rounded up in a series of raids in February. Clarke will assist in the prosecution of J. C. Vinson, charged with transporting more than a gallon of legal liquor without a permit, if the case comes up at that time, A. B. Clarke, publicity director of the board, said today.

Vinson was fined $50 and $18 worth of ABC liquor in his possession was confiscated when he was tried in Municipal Court at Lynchburg yesterday. Today he noted his appeal to the Corporation Court.

The liquor control board has ruled that a person in Virginia must obtain a permit from a legal liquor store manager before he can transport more than a gallon of spirits, but even then he can take out of an ABC store only one gallon at a time. The rule is directed against bootleggers, Director Clarke explained, and this is not the first case arising from its violation.

Vinson pleaded he did not know of the ruling and said he had bought the 18 pints and 2 quarts to take with him on a trip into North Carolina.

Albany Wins Slugfest, 19-14, as Nats' Rookie Hurlers Fail

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

Biloxi, Miss., March 15.

I AM finding it increasingly difficult with the passing seasons to become warmed up to what was once the pet topic of this department—baseball contracts. Time was when I could work myself into a terrific state of rebellion at the tyranny with which club owners impose their will on ball players in the form of salary contracts, but I fear I am getting the capitalistic viewpoint.

POVICH.

I used to require nothing more than a holdout case like Walter Stewart's to set me off on an impassionate portrayal of the big league club owner as a combined modern Shylock and Simon Legree, wielding a snakewhip over his human chattels as he demanded the last ounce of energy in exchange for a pittance, but today I find myself apathetic.

Perhaps it's the life of the ball players down here in B'luxi, as seen by this department, that cools my sympathies for the poor, downtrodden, wretched wights who are forced to depend upon the munificence of the grasping club owners. I have been watching the regulars filter into camp for several days, now, and the scenes certainly move one to pity at their plight.

They roll up to the hotel in shiny new cars, do these poor unfortunates, autos as long as a block, that disgorge, besides themselves, their wives, their golf clubs, the latest thing in match luggage, and, mayhap, a pekinese, all acquired from their niggardly wages as ball players. These are the folks who are being ground under the heels of high-handed club owners who force their regulars to subsist on an average yearly wage of only $8,000.

SO, when Walter Stewart at first rejects an offer of $7,000 to pitch every fourth day for the seven months of the baseball season, I find it difficult to take my pen in hand and rush to the defense of the slaving athletes in weeping generalizations to the effect that even the ball players' rights at law are not respected by the capitalistic club owners.

The ball players do have rights at law. But they dare not seek them. Organized baseball still trembles from the Supreme Court decision of 1912 which upheld the validity of players' contracts on one point and left the way open for the invalidation on another which involved interstate commerce regulations. So, it is small wonder that baseball's pooh-bahs are eager to keep the game out of the courts.

Woe to the intrepid but foolish fellow who attempts to make a legal issue out of his ball-playing contract in an effort to gain his release so he might sign with another club. He might be upheld in court, but his earning power as a ball player would be no more. Under the big league code, penalization of a recalcitrant ball player amounts to no less than a boycott. A player dissatisfied with the salary terms of one team, has his choice of signing at the club owner's terms or staying out of base ball, for, under the organized baseball code, title to a ballplayer passes only with the club owner's consent.

The club owners make a gesture of dealing fairly with the ball players in contract matters by the inclusion in their code of the ball player's right to present his case to Commissioner Landis if salary terms are not satisfactory. But it is the club owners, not the ball players, who pay Mr. Landis $40,000 annually for deciding such matters, so one may draw one's own conclusions.

EVEN so, the ball player gets a fair shake in salary matters, generally. No other profession maintained the same relative wage scale throughout the years of the depression as did baseball. During the last five years not half the clubs in either big league has been able to show a profit on the season, yet not a pay roll lapsed. Baseball continued to pay off.

Hospital internes work for $15 a month and found, apprentice attorneys and engineers are lucky to earn a living wage, yet the veriest rookie in big league baseball can command a $3,500 salary. On the Washington club the regulars easily average $8,000, plus their expense allowance while in training camp and while traveling. And on the road they travel in the best style, even luxuriously, at the club owner's expense.

I subscribe to the belief that the ball player, like any other journeyman, is never overpaid, that he is entitled to all that he can command. But, in baseball, too, the laws of supply and demand govern. The fellow with the most stuff on the ball gets the biggest pay, which is as it should be. The holdouts can squawk until their shouts are heard on Mars, and the club owner will always have one swell comeback: "You can't beat the hours."

'Protect Fisherman So Trout Won't Bite Him, Gallico Urges

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, March 15.—As an old trout fisherman who has survived many a hair-raising campaign with those finny terrors of our streams and lakes, I might remind you all that the opening of the trout fishing season is no more than three weeks away, and to call to your attention once more the myriad risks run by the thousands upon thousands of heroes who single-handed will again invade the waters to fight it out wth the dangerous denizens of the deep.

And the reason I am placing this piece on the wires at this early date is because, before it is too late, I wish to come out strongly for heavier body armor for trout fishermen. If the foolhardy fishermen will not protect themselves, it is up to the Government to step in and make them do it. The annual fatalities connected with this dangerous sport are a national disgrace. As long as there are fearless adventurers, the trout will be pursued, but something ought to be done to protect human life.

Most of the paraphernalia now worn by intrepid trout fishermen are gauged to withstand the attacks of 9-inch trout. A great deal of it will. But occasionally one of these hardy sportsmen will encounter and be attacked by a fish 10 inches, and some times a foot long. When that happens, the ordinary rubber hip boots, or canvas waders and wading shoes are useless as protection, no matter what the sporting goods houses claim. I realize that it is dangerous for me to be so frank at the risk of losing business, but we have always been frank, fearless and upright in public service and do not mean to stop now.

There was, for instance, no publicity given the near tragedy that occurred in Upper Saugerties last year when a fisherman named Smith was attacked by an 11-inch trout, and, finding that his boots were useless against the voracious fish, finally saved himself by climbing a tree.

Nor is it generally known that after fighting a 13-inch trout, a giant, for 16 minutes, in a private stream in the Pocono Mountains, another fisherman named Smith was taken to the Stroudsburg General Hospital suffering from trout bites, lacerations, shock and general exhaustion. His wounds healed, but he is still living in a sanitorium trying to recover from the nervous shock to his system.

I wonder how many people realize that year after year, foolhardy fishermen walk into trout streams, armed with nothing but hip boots or waders, a delicate bamboo rod, silk thread line, three boxes of lures, a landing net, a hip flask, a wicker basket, a pair of pliers, a pocket knife, a handbook, a basket lunch, a pair of scales, a measuring rod, a leader box, compass, portable cook stove and fishing license.

Inter-Mural Bouts Are Slated Tonight

Three Outstanding Fights on Card at Maryland.

Slightly more than a baker's dozen of young men about town with leanings of various degrees and angles toward pugilism will climb through the ropes tonight at Ritchie Coliseum and swing a few fists for the glory of alma mater and the satisfaction of busting a rival's beezer. The young gentlemen, incidentally, are to compete in the second annual intermural championships.

In the cases of Catholic University and Maryland, who have five and four men in the finals, respectively, the fans may have the privilege of gazing upon some who may occupy positions on the 1936 varsity team.

Three bouts should be outstanding. Joe Meglin, of Georgetown, defends his heavyweight crown against Johnny Birkland, of Maryland, and Fletcher, of Maryland, will make his debut against Krug, of Maryland, in the light-heavyweight class. You can mark the pair down for lively sessions, and add to it May, Catholic, vs. Ferrari, Georgetown, in the 135-pound class.

Only Lanahan Impressive On Mound

Minor Leaguers Pound Scrivener, Armbrust, Diggs, Coppola.

Stone, Kress and Schulte Are Stars at Bat for Washington.

By Shirley L. Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

BILOXI, Miss., March 15.—It rained again in Biloxi today. It rained base hits, and Manager Bucky Harris' estimation of his rookie pitchers was all wet. He saw five of 'em in action for and against the Albany Club, and four miraculously escaped with their lives. The fifth made not only a gracefu', but impressive exit.

One thousand Biloxians, led to Biloxi Field behind the tooting of the high-school band, saw the Nats make their debut in the Shrimp Coast League and lose what had been advertised as a ball game to the Albany Club, of the International League, by the inflated score of 19 to 14.

Only one week off the bus that had transported them South to their training grounds in nearby Gulfport, the Albany Club apparently brought their midseason batting eyes with them. They had 18 hits and their 19 runs before the sixth inning was over. Of course, it might have been the Washington pitching.

Diggs a Sensation (?).

Young Reese Diggs, tabbed as the sensation of the Nats' rookie talent, was indeed a sensation. The unfailing accuracy with which he hit the Albany bats was no less than sensational. He began moderately enough by allowing one run in the first inning, struck his stride by permitting five hits and four runs in the second, and virtually blew up by allowing only one run in the third.

The game was a double-barreled disappointment to Harris, inasmuch as the 14 runs the Nats compiled were amassed against two rookie Washington pitchers he had loaned to the Albany team for the occasion.

Henry Coppola breezed along nicely for three innings, in which he allowed only three hits, despite allowing three runs, but five hits in the fourth and fifth innings, including two triples and a double, terminated his tour of duty quite unsatisfactorily.

Lanahan Holds Foe.

But Dick Lanahan had his day today. The former Eastern High School left hander, who has been consistently rated far below the others of the rookie crop, blossomed this afternoon as the most talented. He alone of the five rookies who worked held the enemy scoreless, and the one hit he allowed in his three-inning term against Albany was a fluke affair which the wind carried away from Ossie Bluege. It was flukey enough to descend squarely on Bluege's back after the veteran had made an ineffective dive for the ball.

Orville Armbrust, Chattanooga acquisition, virtually wrote himself a one-way ticket back to Chattanooga with his four-inning exhibi-

Meade Now Limited To Bradley Mounts

Bad Rides on Short-Priced Horses Brings Ruling.

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, March 15.—Jockey Don Meade, who has been showing poor form here, especially astride short-priced horses, was ordered, after this race, not to accept any outside mounts. This ruling, coming from the stewards, means that Meade may only accept mounts for his employer, E. R. Bradley. The square-jawed, husky lad looked bad on Sisowen in the third race and his performance on Biography the previous day drew no praise. It is understood that the Sisowen race was the one that caused the stewards to make their edict.

Wright Rides 5 Tropical Winners

Blond Jockey's Sixth Mount Third; Given Ovation by Crowd.

By the Associated Press.

TROPICAL PARK, March 15.—Wayne Wright, a little cotton-headed fellow who is making quite a go of riding race horses, reached the peak of his career here this afternoon when he piloted five winners—the last four in succession. Wright had one other mount and he finished third on this occasion. A quiet-mannered youngster of 18 years, Wright has been in sensational form for the past six months and has led the riding colony for four meetings in a row.

Wright first came into prominence in the East when he topped the jockeys at Pimlico last fall. He repeated at Bowie and then won the riding honors at the first Tropical meeting before shifting over to Hialeah to again set the pace. Wright rode three winners a day five times at Hialeah. He is under contract to J. E. Widener.

The success of Wright has made him the object of the affections of the betters. Many have disregarded horses and form to play each and every mount of the star rider. They shared in his achievement today, for all of his five mounts paid good prices. His winners were: DeValera, $8.10; Jadaan, $5; Golden Way, $6.10; Mintana, $22.50, and Dancing Boy, $7.50.

Wright was given an ovation when he returned to the stewards' stand with Dancing Boy after the seventh race.

Jadaan Makes Good.

Mrs. W. T. Anderson's 3-year-old gelding, Jadaan, a very much improved horse, stepped up into higher company and drove to a head victory in the Wakulla Purse of 5½ furlongs. Jadaan was the fourth straight winning favorite and was second on Wright's list. The B. B. Stable's Good Harvest, which opened favorite, but receded to second choice, was an easy second under poor handling, beating E. McGehee's Erin Lad by three lengths. The winner paid $5 and made the very fast time of 1:05 1-5.

Paddock tips were plentiful in the first race. The result was that the play on the alleged good things merely served to produce a better price on the natural favorite. De Valera, which Wright booted home

Beat Farrell and Goodwin in Florida Golf Play.

By the Associated Press.

St. Augustine, Fla., March 15.—Willie Macfarlane, Tuckahoe, N. Y., professional, and his amateur partner, Arthur Lynch, Mamaroneck, N. Y., played brilliant golf on a wind-swept course today to edge into the semifinals of the national amateur-professional match play tournament on a 4-and-3 victory over Johnny Farrell, Hollywood, Fla., and Tommy Goodwin, Mamaroneck.

Posting a flashy 65, 7 under par, on the morning round for a 3-up edge, Macfarlane and Lynch bore down again in the afternoon to card a 32 on the first nine.

Other victors were Clarence Clark and Mike Parco. Jimmy Hines and Tommy Tailer and Paul Runyan and Charles Whitehead.

Jackson Drives In Both of N. Y. Tallies; Red Sox Swamped, 15-2.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, March 15.—With Travis Jackson driving in both runs, the New York Giants today defeated the world champion St. Louis Cardinals, 2 to 0.

Jackson doubled in the fourth inning off Bill Walker to score Hank Leiber, who had tripled, and in the sixth cracked out a three-bagger himself to send Phil Weintraub across the plate.

Leroy Parmelee, Hal Schumacher and John Leonardo, a rookie, combined to hold the Cards to nine scattered hits. The Giants were blanked the first three innings and the last two by a pair of former Chicago Cubs—Pat Malone and Bud Tinning.

The score by innings:

Browns Batter Red Sox.

West Palm Beach, Fla., March 15 (AP).—The St. Louis Browns recovered their lost batting vision today and battered three rookie pitchers of the Boston Red Sox all over the park for 13 hits and a 15-to-2 victory.

Merena opened for the Sox and held up well for three innings, letting in three runs. The barrage started in the sixth. A three-bagger by Joe Cronin and singles by Solters and Cooke accounted for the Sox runs.

The score by innings:

St. Louis (A)	201 004 80x—15 13 1
Boston (A)	000 200 000— 2 8 3

Cub Trounce Bucs.

Los Angeles, March 15 (AP).—Four runs in the eighth inning at the expense of Hal Smith today gave the Chicago Cubs their second victory over their National League rivals, the Pittsburgh Pirate, 7 to 5.

Bill Jurges previously had driven a home run over the right-field fence to tie the score. Chuck Klein also hit a homer for the victors.

Boxing Is Dropped By W. & L. Council

By the Associated Press.

Lexington, Va., March 15.—The Washington and Lee athletic council late this afternoon voted to discontinue boxing, becoming the first Southern Conference school to drop the pugilistic game as an intercollegiate sport.

Following its decision, the council issued this statement:

"While we feel that boxing classes, where a boy is taught the principles of self-defense, are desirable, we believe that intercollegiate boxing is an athletic activity in which one of the chief objectives is, in effect, to incapacitate one's opponent.

"We consider this to be inconsistent with the aims of an educational institution."

Net Body Votes Down Perry Movies

U. S. Delegate Is Leader of Opposition Forces; Vote Is 42 to 41.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, March 15.—Fred Perry's dream of playing in tennis movies and at the same time retaining his amateur standing to defend the Davis Cup for Great Britain was shattered by the International Tennis Federation today.

After a red-hot session behind closed doors, the Czechoslovakian proposal to modify rules to sanction the appearance of amateurs in tennis action films failed to receive the necessary two-thirds majority. The vote was 42 for and 41 against.

Walters Anderson, a delegate from the United States, led the opposition. He declared it would mean "a breakdown of the fundamental standards of play."

English delegates, who fear Perry may jump to the professional ranks unless he can play in the movies, had the support of Belgium and Australia in backing the Czechoslovakian move. Italy, France and Holland lined up with the United States.

Hot Springs, Roanoke Seek State Amateur

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Richmond, Va., March 15.—The Virginia State Golf Association, which will meet on April 6, is expected to stage the annual amateur championship either at Hot Springs or Roanoke.

Richmond probably will get the women's championship, with Hermitage Country Club as the site.

Due to the lack of interest in State Open championships in recent years, indications are that this event may be dropped this season.

'Iron Men' Vie In Contests On Track

Cunningham, Hornbostel Among Nation's Aces in K. of C. Meet.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 15.—"Iron man" performances will be in order tomorrow night when the Knights of Columbus stage the traditional finale to the indoor track and field campaigns at Madison Square Garden with many of the Nation's greatest athletes competing in the sixteenth annual meet.

To Seek Three Victories.

Cunningham, who established the indoor record of 4.08.4 in winning the Columbian mile last year, will go after not only his favorite event, but also will seek victory in the 1,000-yard, where he will meet Hornbostel, beaten only once indoors in the 600-1,000 sphere in three years, Brown, Dawson and John Thompson, of Manhattan.

An hour later Cunningham will return to meet his greatest rival of the year, Gene Venzke, of Pennsylvania; Dawson, Harry Williamson, of North Carolina, and Joe Mangan, in the mile.

Hornbostel will step out 80 minutes after his clash with Cunningham in the Casey 600, and will find opposing him the best field ever brought together for the race, including Glenn Hardin, Louisiana State's greater quarter-miler; Milton Sandler, national 600-meter champion and last year's winner; Tim Ring, of Holy Cross, and Ivan Fuqua, formerly of Indiana.

To Run in Half-Mile.

Brown will make his second start of the evening in the half-mile run, in which he is the outstanding choice.

The two-mile race also attracted an all-star field, with John W. Follows, national 5,000-meter champion from Washington, favored over Ray Sears, of Butler, who set his American record of 9:07.4 in winning the event last year; Joe McCluskey, national steeplechase titleholder; Frank Crowley, national outdoor 5,000-meter champion, and Tom Russell, Manhattan's I. C. A. A. A. A. winner.

60-Yard Entrants.

Seeded at the head of the four heats in the 60-yard dash are Ben Johnson, Columbia's sensational sophomore; Jesse Owens, of Ohio State; Ralph Metcalfe, of Marquette, and Eulace Peacock, of Temple.

The remainder of the card is of equal brilliance. Owens, who created a world indoor record of 25 feet 9 inches in winning the national broad-jump title, heads the field in that event, while Vincent Murphy, Notre Dame's new 6-foot 8-inch high jumper, will meet the veterans of the Eastern meets—George Spitz, Harold Osborn and Al Threadgill.

Mangin and Bell Gain Indoor Final

Trim Hall and Seligson; to Clash Today.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 15.—Gregory S. Mangin, the Nation's foremost amateur indoor player, and his arch-rival, Berkeley Bell, seeded first and second, respectively, reached the final round today and will face each other tomorrow for the thirty-sixth Men's National Indoor Singles Tennis championship.

Registering his fifth consecutive straight-set triumph, Mangin, winner in 1932 and 1933, advanced at the expense of J. Gilbert Hall, South Orange, N. J., 6—3, 6—2, 6—4.

Bell's advance terminated the comeback campaign of Julius Seligson, national intercollegiate titleholder of 1928. The score was 6—3, 6—3, 2—6, 6—1.

Imp Stopped By Carnera In Ninth

Loser's Manager Halts 'Slaughter' as Fans Voice Disapproval.

By the United Press.

NEW YORK, March 15.—Former champion Primo Carnera blasted a fellow man-mountain from his comeback trail tonight when he battered huge Ray Impellettiere about Madison Square Garden's ring until the Imp's own manager, Harry Lenny, jumped into the ring and stopped the slaughter in the ninth round.

Lenny's action gave Carnera a technical knockout victory, with only one more session to go in their scheduled ten-rounder. It was a humane move on gray-haired Lenny's part because his 258½-pound giant from Cold Spring, N. Y., was battered groggy, bleeding and helpless.

However, the near-capacity house of 18,000 fans greeted the action with thundering boos. They were vociferously disappointed because the 268-pound former heavyweight champion, in his first American appearance since losing the title to Maxie Baer last summer, was unable to put his staggering opponent away. Impellettiere had been on the verge of a knockout since midway in the seventh round, when Primo shook him up with a barrage of clubbing right and left hooks to the head.

Imp Staggers Primo.

The largest crowd attending a professional fight at the garden in more than a year thought they would witness indeed a bashing battle of fe-fo-fi-fumming man monsters when the bout opened and the 6-foot 7½-inch Impellettiere staggered Primo twice with steaming shots to the chin.

But the action slowed down in the fifth round and Referee Jack (the Giant Killer) Dempsey spent a busy 15 minutes thereafter prying the two big hulks apart. Between Carnera's inability to finish his man and the Imp's lack of ruggedness, the booing customers were convinced at the end that the bigger they come the lousier they maul.

Dempsey warned him for the foul, and notified the two judges, Tommy Shortell and Charlie Lynch. Thus the round was taken from Primo.

There were no knockdowns during the bout, but time and again in the seventh, eighth and ninth, Carnera's clubbing hooks and long "pooshes" almost drove the Imp through the ropes. Carnera wrestled and smashed him from corner to corner and across the ring.

After taking the first round, the 25-year-old American giant eased up in the second, and Carnera took that session with his short hooks in close. The Imp boxed well in the third and landed a few telling long range punches that staggered the giant from Mussolini-land twice in the fourth, and that round was wrapped up for him with Carnera perpetrating the foul.

But that was Raymond's last stand. He started holding in the fifth, and lost it by a narrow margin. The action slowed considerably in the sixth.

Happy Chirpings of 'Gloomy Gus' Clark Augur Difference Between 4th and 6th for Brooklyn

By Edward J. Neil.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

ORLANDO, Fla., March 15.—Baseball's original Gloomy Gus for the last two years—sore-armed Watson (Lefty) Clark—is whistling and singing again, and those happy chirpings may mean the difference between sixth and fourth places this season to the Brooklyn Dodgers.

The pain is gone from the pitching arm of the best southpaw Brooklyn has had since the days of Nap Rucker.

"Watty" has a hop on his fast one again. And all's right with the world of Casey (Svengali) Stengel, manager of the flock, who had considerable to do with it.

In 1932, Clark was just about the best southpaw in the National League, Carl Hubbell being short of his prime then. He won 20 games for the Dodgers. His fast one hopped and crackled, his big curves swirled around the hitters' bats. His little ones had them dislocating their vertebrae. Then something happened.

Some of it might have been mental, but Clark could scarcely throw a ball in 1933. Brooklyn sent him to the Giants with Lefty O'Doul in the deal that got them Sam Leslie, belting first baseman, and Len Koenecke, a .330 hitter and ball hawk in center, two of Casey's mainstay's now.

Clark's arm was just as bad with the Giants. He was about to be waived out of the league when the Dodgers claimed him last August. If the cure holds, Bill Terry is going to be remembering ruefully again that Brooklyn still is in the league—with three stars of his for which he hasn't a thing left to show today.

"You're out of the hospital," Stengel informed Clark this spring. "There's no surgeons around here. Let's see you pitch."

He changed Clark's wind-up, making him throw his arm way back behind his head in the wind-up. Clark started pitching. There was no pain. Yesterday he went four innings against the regulars and they got two singles. Al Lopez, his catcher in the big 1932 year, got one of them.

"Shucks," said Clark, "He knows my stuff too good, that's why."

"He's as good right now as he was in 1932,' says Lopez.

"His control is perfect. His curve's just as big. The fast one's hopping."

So the 31-year-old southpaw who wept in the dressing rooms of 1933 1934 out of sheer chagrin at the hopelessness of the situation is singing in the showers again.

"Fifteen games from Watty," says Stengel, rubbing his hand, "and we're in the first division. You can address me now on as Bonesetter Stengel if you wish."

by a length. Sand Runner headed the slow-starting Marge for the place.

The talent made it two in a row when Edri, paying $5, easily outfooted 11 other maiden 2-year-old fillies in the half-mile dash, second on the card. Peloria ran along with the winner in the early stages but Edri drew away and reached the judges three lengths to the good. Peloria had weak contention for the runner-up award, beating Lookabout by four lengths. The time was .48 flat.

Canterboy Takes Race.

The smart money was for Canterboy in the third race and the gelding managed to get home by a nose under strong handling by "Red" Pollard. He closed at 3 to 1 and was the third straight choice to win.

Golden Way and Guapito, both winners at Hialeah in their last outings, drew the bulk of the play in the fifth event and obliged by running as named. Golden way, under Wright's handling, was easily better of the two, leading almost from the break to score by two lengths. Hoops was a poor third after being bumped at the break.

Wright then rode his fourth winner astride the $22.50-for-$2 shot, Mintana, in the one mile of the sixth race. The Idaho youngster took the long shot to the front shortly after the start and nursed his mount along with a daylight advantage until forced to a drive by Idle Along in the final furlong. Wright then held the filly together long enough to register by a half length.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al: Tropical Park, March 15.

Elsewhere on the sport pages you will find an item about Don Meade. Reading between the lines, it says that Meade has been doing some strong-arm work with short-priced horses down here. That is not news. But the fact that officials of this race track have spunk enough to rule against Meade, when the great Bradley is behind him, is news. Henceforth at this race track, Mr. Meade will be seen aboard only the horses belonging to his employer, the great Bradley. It seems that Tropical Park has been watching Meade and it is giving him the benefit of the doubt when it accuses him only of poor riding. Meade rode as badly at Hialeah, and many of the favorite players could have eaten him alive, but nothing was done about it. Meade paraded through the Maryland season and had the turf fans tearing out their hair. Nothing was done about it there either. Like Bradley horses, Meade is an in-and-out rider. One of the colored clockers, who bets rather heavily, has Meade about right. He says, "When that Meade don't, I does, and when that Meade does, I don't."

BILL.

First race—We might as well start the day Wright. The Idaho boy rides Moane Keala and I see no reason for mistakes. Frederick and Erebus appear to be the ones most likely to cause trouble, if such materializes.

Second race—Chicle Ship's recent races have been encouraging. This appears to be the spot suitable for graduation exercises. Arcaro will do the saddle honors. Sun Reverie and Bye Bye Mary to complete the money bracket.

Third race—James City should take this field into camp without a whole lot of trouble. He is at tops as that recent victory indicates. Wright rides Black Highbrow and this one will be in the thick of it at the end. Blue Donna for the show.

Fourth race—Taunton is a trifle cheaper than the opposition he meets here, but packs a stretch punch that may bring him victory after the front runners get through burning the early oil. West Main and Golden Fate for the place and show.

Sixth race—Lillian Uhl gets the Bennings call in this mile race. Gets in with only steadying weight, and I have Clocker Mike's word that she's going to take down the brackets. Stick Handle will be dangerous even with Bagur up. Dancing Cloud for the show.

Seventh race—Bounding Count may like this route and carries only 101 pounds. Ahmed and Big Show for the other awards.

Eighth race—Flying Dere, Black Watch, True Sentiment is the order in which I prefer them in the day's finale.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DE VALERA, $8.10, $4.60, $3.70; SAND RUNNER, $22.80, $18.10; MARGE, $15.60.

DE VALERA, on the outside and clear of interference, moved up very fast, finally raced ALKALI into defeat, but had to be ridden hard to stall off the determined bid of the fast-closing SAND RUNNER. The latter came with a rush and was wearing the winner down. MARGE, away last, had a rough trip, but closed gamely and was third in last stride. ALKALI had plenty of speed and held on well. WATERSET had no excuse. DOUGLAS F was knocked out of it in early part.

SECOND RACE—Four furlongs. Purse, $700. Claiming. For 2-year-old maiden fillies. Start poor. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 2:54. Off at 2:57½. Winner, Maemere Farm's b. or br. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—EDRI, $5.00, $3.50, $3.10; PELORIA, $6.70, $5.00; LOOKABOUT, $3.70.

EDRI beat the gate, ran into lead, made PELORIA stop, then drew away and won nicely in hand. PELORIA, displaying good speed, was hustled along from the start and ran a smart race. LOOKABOUT raced greenly, but showed good speed when she settled into her stride. BERRY PATCH was hard ridden all the way. RUSTIC LASSIE broke fast, but was knocked out of it soon after the start and never had a chance. EPINEL showed early speed.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700. Claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:28. Off at 3:32½. Winner, H. Donzan's b. g. (3), by Canter—Comice. Trained by G. W. Coburn. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:12 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANTERBOY, $8.00, $6.30, $4.60; IDLE VICTORY, $6.00, $4.10; SISOWEN, $3.40.

CANTERBOY, running in his best form, ran head and head with IDLE VICTORY and outgamed the latter in a long drive. IDLE VICTORY, displaying keen speed, held on gamely. SISOWEN, away in a tangle, went up very fast and was taken to inside and was in behind horses at end. M. J. BRENNAN failed to show his speed. HAPPY FIND broke fast, but dropped right out of it. She was ridden with poor judgment.

FOURTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800. The Wakulla. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 4:05. Off at 4:05½. Winner, Mrs. W. T. Anderson's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JADAAN, $5.00, $2.90, $2.50; GOOD HARVEST, $3.20, $2.60; ERIN LAD, $3.00.

JADAAN was well ridden. He was allowed to rate along to the middle of the turn, where he was sent to the front, drew out, but had to be ridden hard to win. GOOD HARVEST was probably best, but was the victim of a poorly judged ride. ERIN LAD displayed keen speed and held on well. IN CHANCERY had no mishap. DUNCANS LEAP and CHANCE RAY were both outrun.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800. The Red Road. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 4:40. Off at 4:41. Winner, W. N. Adrians' br. h. GOLDEN WAY broke well in motion, was sent to the front going into first turn and, rated along, drew away easily in stretch. GUAPITO moved up gamely turning out of back stretch, closed fast, but never threatened the winner. HOOPS was kept close up and ran good race. POSTSCRIPT had more early speed than usual and tired in final furlong. ALADDINS DREAM had no excuse. KINDACORN never a contender.

Bi-State Clubs To Plan for Golf Year

Belle Haven Will Send Two to Meeting Today in Winchester.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., March 15.—The Belle Haven Country Club, winners of the Bi-State Golf Association cup last year, will compete in the league again this year. The association will meet tomorrow at the George Washington Hotel, Winchester, where representatives from the competing clubs will discuss plans and map out a schedule for the season. Charlie Rollins, chairman of the golf committee, and Andy Clarke, also of the committee, will represent the local club. Other entrants in the association are Winchester, Purcellville and Martinsburg.

Until Bi-State competition gets under way, the Belle Haven club will hold a series of sweepstakes, open to all members, each Saturday.

St. Agnes School will conduct a spring sports campaign under direction of Miss Hildegarde Ross, athletic director, with the girls taking part in baseball, archery and track. Competition is strictly intramural. The Green and Gold teams will compete in each sport for the school championship.

The St. Mary's Celtics held a baseball meeting last night at the home of Theodore Beach. It was announced that a drill would be held at 1 p. m. Sunday at Baggett's Stadium under direction of Coach Russ Kidwell.

Some of last year's players seeking berths on the team are Bill Langford, Gene Zimmerman, Joe Hamilton, Elett Cabell, Billy Lynch and Joe Garvey. Newcomers are Hal Chilcotte, Hardy Gensmere, Doug Morgan, Hank Gardner and Jack Hudson.

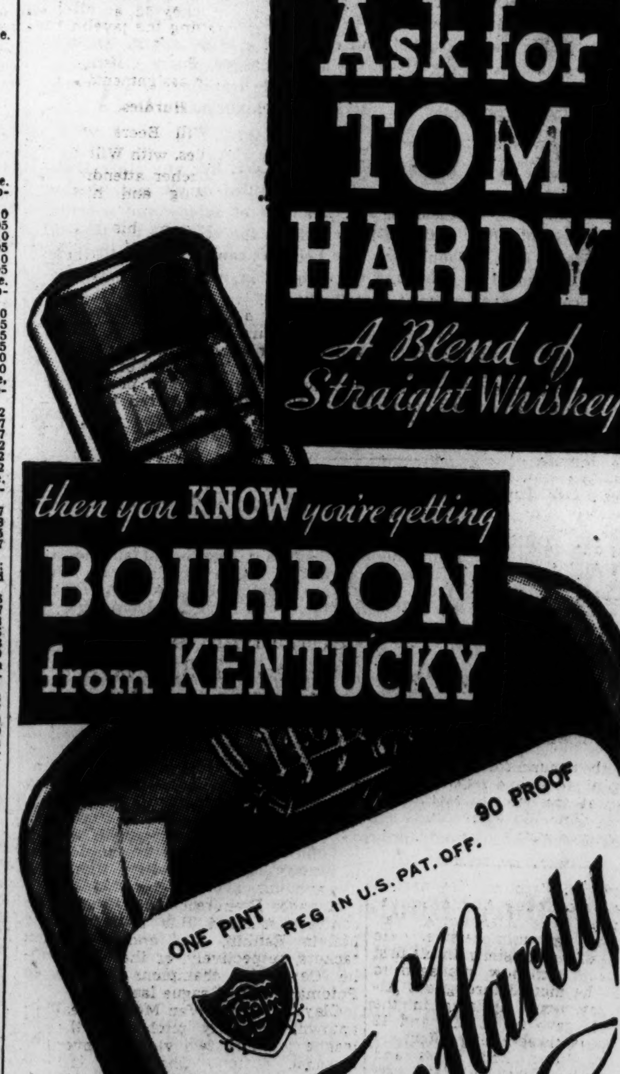

The Celtics basket ball team will meet the Columbia Firemen tomorrow night at Armory Hall in a game for the unlimited championship of this ctiy. Two preliminary games have been carded, with the Post and Celtics clashing in a Junior League game, and the Alexandria Light Infantry opposing some strong senior team.

Pete Bostwick Rides Two Winners Abroad

Hurst Park, England, March 15 (AP).—G. H. (Pete) Bostwick, riding his own horse, Castle Irwell, at 7 to 4, won the Amateurs' Handicap Steeplechase today by five lengths from Mrs. N. Coll's Prince Marlo, which paid 8 to 13, and two others.

Maryland A. C., Olmsted and Flashes Win A. A. U. Court Duels

Fifth Night In Tourney Thriller

All Three Court Games Are Decided in Last Minute of Play.

A TRIO of briskly played games, all decided in the last minute of play, marked the fifth night of play in the annual District A. A. U. basket ball tourney at Tech High School last night.

The Maryland A. C. defeated Rockville, 34 to 30; Olmsted Grill conquered George's Radio, 36 to 34; and Heurich's Flashes defeated Certified Bakers, 41 to 37.

The keen scoring eye of Bob Fuchs, former American University star, prevented Rockville from scoring one of the tournaments greatest upsets. It was Fuchs, who ripped the cords for 13 points, who brought the Seat Pleasant quintet from behind after Rockville finished the first half with a 21-9 margin.

Markland, who threw in 13 points, and Steinberg and Becker were outstanding for the losers, who had met defeat twice before this season—by comfortable margins—at Maryland's hands.

Bakers Take Early Lead.

The Flashes' debut was a harrowing experience for the Flashes, who, after drawing a bye in the first round, almost were eliminated in their first tournament appearance. Ches and Everett Cross presented the Bakers with a 9-5 lead early in the first half, but Tony Latona and Tommy Folliard countered with shots that tied it up at 9-all.

Again the Bakers went ahead, this time, 14-9, and again the beer boys squared accounts, tying it up at 14-all. Heurichs pushed to the fore in the last two minutes of the half and had a 17-14 lead at the intermission.

The Bakers foun dthemselves 14 points behind their rivals with most of the second half spent before putting on a rally that amazed everybody in general and Heurich's in particular. They pulled up to within 25-31 of the leaders and then found themselves snagged by the Flashes' close guarding.

Play With Four Men.

For several minutes they battled along basket for basket until the loss of Batten and Ches Cross on personal fouls tolled the death knell for the Bakers. But even though playing with only four men they displayed a surprisingly strong punch, and two long shots by Hollingsworth made up all but three points between the teams in a brilliant and exciting rally that was abruptly halted by the final whistle.

Olmsted started in big-league fashion, rolling up 11 points before George's men realized the ball game was under way. But once the Radiomen found their stride it was a real battle—the best on the card. Olmsted's 11-point lead had been shaved to a 17-14 margin by the half.

Keyser Leads Attack.

With Cliff Keyser, former Wilson Tecahers College ace, pumping leather into the bucket as you might draw a bucket of water, the Radio squad caught the opposition at 22-22 and proceeded to assume a 26-22 lead. The outlook was extremely gloomy, to put it mildly, for Olmstead until Keyser was thumbed off the court with four personal fouls charged against him. With their lanky forward went George's chances of scoring one of the tournament's greatest upsets, but it failed to dampen their ardor, and not until Bus Cross came through with a carefully executed long shot and foul throw, all in the last minute of play, did the eventual losers surrender hope.

George's last slim hope of victory—a free throw by Smith—had preceded Cross' bucket by several seconds, and with this slim margin to cling to the boys tried freezing the ball. But the Grillmen were too strong at the finish.

Albany Club Wins Over Nats, 19-14

tion on the mound for Albany. He gave up nine hits and seven runs as the Nats at one point threatened to wipe out their 10-run deficit. Once he forced two runs across the plate.

Scrivener Is Failure.

Following Diggs on the mound for the Nats, young Archie Scrivener, diminutive Alexandria, Va., southpaw, was unimpressive. He ran into a five-run storm in his first inning and, somehow, managed to stay on the mound throughout Albany's seven-run uprising in the sixth. He gave up 11 hits and 12 runs in his three-inning effort.

Johnny Stone, Red Kress and Fred Schulte were the Nats' batting heroes. Kress notified Harris that he is squarely in the fight for the shortstop job by banging a triple against the left field fence that was the longest hit of the day. Schulte's triple was barely shorter, but Stone had a field day, with four straight hits. His triple to center field in the eighth would have hit the flagpole in Griffith Stadium.

Joe Mills, former Washington sandlot star, played third base in the last three innings, but failed to receive a fielding chance. In his one turn at bat, with the bases full, he flied out to center field.

Al Espinosa Cards 63 On 6,800-Yard Course

Mexico City, Mex., March 15 (U.P.).—Al Espinosa, of Akron, Ohio, now engaged as professional at the Mexico Country Club, Thursday established a new world record for a 6,800-yard golf course when he shot a 63. Espinosa made 9 birdies and 9 pars. He was playing with former President of Mexico Abelardo Rodriguez, who made a 77.

Bootblack, Punched in Fun, Asks $3,000 in Dempsey Suit

Special Dispatch to The Post.

NEW YORK, March 15.—Jack Dempsey has always been the idol of Browny McFarland, colored bootblack, and he still is, but Browny wants $3,000 from the former champion after feeling one of the lethal Dempsey punches himself.

Browny wants the cash because Dempsey, in a playful mood, shoved him in the abdomen with the powerful Dempsey elbow on January 8, after receiving a shave and a shine in the barber shop where the colored lad worked.

According to Browny, who is suing the pugilist in City Court, he felt severe pains a couple of hours after his idol had dealt out the jesting blow, and went to Polyclinic Hospital. The trouble with hospitals, though, said Browny—5 feet 4 and 130 pounds—was that the doctors all thought he was a psychopathic case when he said he was suffering from a Jack Dempsey punch.

For two months he has been receiving private treatment, but he is still confined to his home. And to make matters worse, he's been informed he can't come back to the barber shop, where they don't like employes to sue such prominent customers as Dempsey.

The former champ, served with papers in the suit at his home, has entered a general denial to the charges.

Old Line Looks To Fine Year On Track

Earl Widmyer Is Only One of Several Promising 1935 Athletes.

WELL supplied with veteran material, supported by a bountiful array of promising sophomores, Coach Geary Eppley this season envisions triumphs for his University of Maryland trackmen far beyond the horizon of the Southern Conference.

Heading the list of Terrapin legmen is Earl Widmyer, who must defend his conference 100-yard title and Penn Relays 100-yard meters championship, which he won handily last year. The "Southern Express" served notice on his rivals that 1935 will be his best season by some sterling indoor work, climaxed by a victory over Ralph Metcalf, national champion, in the West Virginia games.

Other Stars Ready.

But Widmyer is but one of the small army willing to try for old Maryland on the cinder path. Eppley has Milo Sonen and Joe Ryan, the latter still on the injured list, for sprints; Bob Archer and Warren Evans for the quarter; Selby Frank, Joe Galliher and Coleman Headley in the half mile, and Bob Beall and Don Ashton in the 1 and 2 mile events.

Eppley believes Headley is one of the most promising trackmen enrolled at Maryland in recent years. As a freshman last season Headley cracked the school half-mile record and was barely nosed out in the conference mile run last week by Harry Williamson, of North Carolina.

The line-up for field and track events finds Bill Guckeyson, an all-around athlete, heaving the javelin, shot and discus, with Jack Herbsleb, Paul Pfeiffer and Tracy Coleman pressing him for the assignments.

Slye, Beers in Hurdles.

Bob Slye and Will Beers will compete in the hurdles, with Wilbur Duvall and Bob Boucher attending to the pole vaulting and high jumping.

Eppley is counting on his mile relay team for points, and if it displays the same form that marked its record-breaking performance in the conference games last week, he will not be disappointed. A mile team will run in the Penn relays and conference championships, and a sprint medley, comprised of Headley, Evans, Widmyer and probably Ryan, also will be entered in the relays.

Maryland's schedule includes six dual meets, one triangular and the Penn and conference championships.

April 13, University of Richmond, here; 20, Virginia Military Institute, at Lexington; 26 and 27, Penn Relays, at Philadelphia; 29, Virginia, at Charlottesville.

May 4, triangular meet with Washington and Lee and Virginia Polytechnic Institute, here; 11, William and Mary, at Williamsburg; 15, Johns Hopkins, at Baltimore; 17 and 18, Southern Conference, at Durham, N. C.; 25, Navy, at Annapolis.

Corriganville Signs Several '35 Players

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., March 15.—Johnny Mangus and Joe Clancey, regular outfielders of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Club for the past five years, will do their fly chasing and hitting for the Corriganville Hustlers, of the Inter-State League this season, Manager Earl V. Diehl has announced.

Manager Diehl received the signed contracts of Lloyd "Bus" Porter and Melvin Rankin, first and second sackers, respectively, of the Ellerslie Cardinals, champions of the Potomac Valley League last year.

Clayton "Dizzy" Van Meter, Cresaptown, the only pitcher in the league to score two victories over Potomac Edison's Champions last season, also is in line for the 1935 campaign.

D. C. Trackmen To Vie in N.Y. Tonight

Georgetown, Catholic U. to Send Small Squads to K. C. Meet.

A SKELETON SQUAD of Washington College trackmen will leave today at noon for Brooklyn where they are scheduled to appear in the Knights of Columbus games tonight.

From Georgetown will go Doug Hanks and Ed Brown, former Mercersburg Academy stars, now freshmen at the Hilltop, both of whom are undefeated this season. Hanks will run in the 1,000-yard handicap invitation, while Brown will toe the mark for the 600-yard invitation event.

C. U. to Send Two.

Catholic University is sending a promising freshman sprint star in the person of Bill Walker and Bill Lajousky, a veteran campaigner. Both are entered in the 60-yard dash. Walker's performance in the West Virginia University games, a surprisingly good one, stamps him as one of the Cardinals' brightest track prospects.

Coach Dorsey Grimith last night said he intended to enter a mile relay team, but its personnel had not been determined.

70 Hunters to Vie In Point to Point

Today's Warrenton Race Starts at Bellevue.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., March 15.—With five additional entries received today, a field of 70 registered hunters will compete tomorrow in annual Warrenton Point-to-Point races. The committee announced this afternoon that the individual race would begin at Bellevue, the estate of Clark Baldwin, on Waterloo road, and finish at William H. Emery's place on Lees Ridge. The team race will start at this point.

Additional entries were received from G. Ober and Leith Symington, Baltimore; Nancy Shemington, Luthersville, Md.; H. Reginald Bishop, Middleburg, and Amory S. Lawler.

Westvaco A. A. Five Wins Playoff Series

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., March 15.—Finishing in whirlwind style, after the score had been deadlocked at 30-30 early in the fourth period, the Westvaco A. A. basket ball team brought the playoff series for the second half championship of the Interstate League to a quick finish by defeating the Cumberland Cloakers, 40 to 34.

Through their triumph, the second straight in the series, Coach (Eck) Miers' outfit gained the right to meet the Keyser Golden Knights, first-half champions, in a series of three games for the league championship. The series will open here Sunday afternoon.

Physicians Worried as Hamas Nurses Bruises in Sanitarium

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, March 15.—Still suffering from the effects of the terrific thumping he took last Sunday from Max Schmeling, German heavyweight, Steve Hamas rested tonight in a sanitorium.

Although the American's manager, Charley Harvey, and attending physicians hope Hamas will be fully recovered within a fortnight, they admittedly are worried over some of the symptoms the fighter developed after he had been stopped in nine rounds by Schmeling.

"Hamas is suffering from numbness of his left leg, double vision in the left eye and possibly a spinal ailment," Harvey said. "As a result, doctors ordered him to a sanitorium and placed him on a strict diet, forbidding alcohol or tobacco."

Harvey said the physicians are not yet sure that Hamas suffered any injury to his spine. They believe the young New Jersey boxer may be suffering from exhaustion.

Dr. Hans Goebbels, Hamburg physician, asserted that a Schmeling punch, close to the ear, affected Hamas' brain so that he was unable to understand the meaning of words during the fight.

Although bruised, Hamas appeared well during yesterday's reception, given in his honor by Hans Tschammer-Osten, German sports commissioner.

A. A. U. Boxers Fight Finals Tonight

Olympics Near Team Title; Gevinson-Tardugno Bout Feature.

By Bill McCormick.

THE final session of the face-massaging and chin-lifting fiesta, known as the District A. A. U. boxing championship tournament, will be held at the Catholic University gymnasium tonight, starting at 8:30 o'clock. The customary eight bouts in classes ranging from the 112-pound division to the heavyweight class probably will be witnessed by a capacity crowd of about 4,000 if the interest displayed in the two days of preliminary battling may be accepted as a criterion.

Almost without exception, only the best remain to do battle for the District titles. Almost without exception, the bouts are as even as 2 and 2.

That the Olympic A. C. will annex the team title is almost a foregone conclusion. With nine representatives eligible to toss leather, the Matt Twomey organization is represented in every class by at least one contestant. Both 135-pound finalists are swapping swats under the Olympic banner, and even should the club lose all seven of the remaining bouts, it is assured of one champion.

J. C. C. Has Three.

The Jewish Community Center, with three clouters in the finals, is in a position to nose out the Olympics, but only if the favored team falters miserably. Two of the contestants on tonight's program of punch are unattached, and the Metropolitan Police Boys Club and Northeast Boys Club each are represented by solitary mitten manipulators.

Greatest interest probably centers in the Lou Gevinson-Joe Tardugno featherweight contest. Eliminated in one of the early rounds last year by one of the horde of Tardugnos who campaign in the ring, Gevinson has sworn revenge on all of the tribe. Joe Tardugno, his opponent, is the youngest of the walloping clan, and many consider him the most promising prospect.

An ideal boxer-slugger combination is carded in the 145-pound division, in which Steve Thompson, who is some shucks as a walloper, is scheduled to do battle against Bob Rawson, the Jewish Community Center's very classy boxer.

Thompson Faces Feary.

Harry Thompson, brother of Steve, has reached the finals in the 135-pound division, which entitles him to have his nose punched by Willie Feary, if a forfeit is not in order. Both lightweights being under the auspices of the Olympic Club, it is possible, but hardly probable, that one or the other will forfeit.

Kirkwood Burke, the unattached heavyweight who has played a prominent part in all amateur tournaments for several years, will be pitted against Bob Coughlin, the Olympics' big boy, in a promising unlimited class contest.

The same scale of prices that prevailed for the preliminary rounds will be in effect for tonight's finals. Ringside reserved seats may be purchased for 85 cents; general admission for 55 cents, and children under 16 will be admitted for 25 cents. The tickets will be on sale at Spalding's until 5 o'clock tonight and the box-office at Catholic University will be opened at 6.

Post Predictions.

112-pound class—Pat Cecchini (N. E. B. C.) vs. Danny De Rosa (Olympic). Cecchini by a knockout.

118-pound class—Henry Peterson (J. C. C.) vs. Eddie Saugstedt (Olympic). Peterson by decision.

145-pound class—Steve Thompson (Olympic) vs. Bob Rawson (J. C. C.). Thompson by decision.

Sports Through Sobel's Eyes—

Northern Va. To Have One League

Sandlot Baseball Group to Have 2 Sections, Managers Agree.

SEPARATION Thursday of the Northern Virginia Baseball League into two loops, one to be known as the Tri-County League and the other to continue under the name of the Northern Virginia League, resulted yesterday in the teams of both favoring a unified league to operate again as the Northern Virginia loop.

J. C. Buchanan, czar of the short-lived Tri-County League, was besieged with requests throughout the day to have the newly formed circuit reassume the Northern Virginia title and sponsor a second division, much on the same plan as last year.

In order to organize this second group, to be known as the Red Division, a meeting of representatives of teams intending to play in it has been called by the Washington Post Sandlot Association for 8 o'clock Monday night in The Post building.

Clubs which have expressed the desire to play in second division are the Virginia White Sox, Clarendon Cardinals, Park Lane, Aldi, Marshall, McLean, Clarendon Business Men, Clarendon A. C. and Arlington.

The Blue Section or Section 1, of the league, headed by Buchanan, is prepared to open the season the last Sunday in April with Middleburg, Manassas, Ballston, Purcellville, Falls Church and Fairfax Station as its member teams. This is the division which temporarily adopted the Tri-County monicker.

Any teams in Northern Virginia are privileged to be represented at Monday's meeting. Should Arlington, runner-up to the championship last year, or any other teams prefer to install a different league, and are able to muster support in that direction, The Post Association, acting always in an advisory capacity, stands ready to sanction it.

Fort Monroe Captures Third Corps Area Title

Fort Monroe's basket ball team lifted Fort Myer's Third Corps Area championship last night by winning impressively from the Cavalrymen, 59 to 47, at Heurich's gymnasium. Fort Myer eliminated Fort Meade, champion of the northern sector, earlier in the week. Fort Monroe had won the southern sector championship and Fort Myer the central sector title.

Monroe took a 29-to-19 lead in the first half and maintained its advantage comfortably through the last two periods.

The championship trophy was presented by Col. Elvid Hunt, chief of staff of the area, to Lieut. Jablonsky, former all-American gridder at West Point and present coach at Fort Monroe.

Great Track Team Expected by W.&M.

'Monk' Little Counted On to Lead Indians.

By the Associated Press.

Williamsburg, Va., March 15.—Led by one of the South's finest performers in Moncure "Monk" Little, William and Mary will put a track team into competition this spring that promises to make Dixie's finest stand up and take notice.

Little, who does four events superlatively and others well if called on, is the former holder of the I. C. A. A. A. A. broad jumping championship. He can crack 10 seconds in the century consistently, has a mark of 21.3 seconds in the furlong, is flirting with the 200-foot mark in the javelin and nobody in this section can touch his 25-foot achievement in the broad jump.

Aiding this capable star are Platt Bullard, of Richmond, an extraordinary half-miler and fine miler; Louis Plummer, in the 2-mile; Woodrow Bralley, about on a par with Little in the javelin event; Flickinger, an exceptional pole vaulter, and Degutis and Murray, in the weight events.

The schedule:

May 4, V. M. I.; 11, Maryland; 17, Richmond; 26, I. C. A. A. A. A., at Boston.

Pinehurst Racing Will Open Today

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Pinehurst, N. C., March 15.—The inauguration of steeplechase racing here tomorrow will mark a new era for this section of North Carolina. The Sandhills Steeplechase and Racing Association will hold its first annual event on a new course built several miles out from the Pinehurst Race Track and Polo Grounds toward Southern Pines at an expense of more than $50,000.

The Sandhills Cup will go to the winner of the day's feature race, a three-mile contest over timber fences.

The first race will be the Pinehurst Steeplechase, two miles over 12 brush jumps. The Southern Pines Steeplechase, to follow, also will be two miles over brush jumps. Hunters' trials, over an inside course, will occupy the morning program.

Among prominent horses entered are Charioteer, owned by Mrs. Jackson Boyd, Southern Pines; The Stag, owned by Richard K. Mellon, Pittsburgh; Fairy Lore, owned by Noel Laing, Amissville, Va.; War Crier and Huntsman, owned by Carlton H. Palmer, New York, and Muskogee, Navarino and Oliver C., owned by Mrs. T. A. Somerville, Upperville, Va.

Schools Stage Swim Meet Today

Central Confident, Though Boasting Only One of Favored Aces.

WITH an abundance of confidence but with only one man fast enough to win a race—such is the odd mental condition and actual strength of the Central High swimming team which makes its bid this afternoon for the title now held by Baltimore City College in the annual South Atlantic High school championships in the Shoreham pool. The preliminary heats open at 2:30 o'clock with the finals scheduled for 8 o'clock.

With Bob Jordan, the young 220-yard shark, entered only in the relays, Central's chances of winning an individual title are more or less nil. Yet, the team, recent winner of the South Atlantic Interscholastic championship in Baltimore, is exuding confidence with every splash.

Only one Washington boy is conceded a first place in any of the swimming events and he won't do Central any good for he is Bill Marmion, of Eastern, a heavy favorite to retain his back-stroke title, won in the record time of 1:10 last year. Bill Tarbett, of Central, though twice beaten by Goldberg, of Baltimore City, has a near 50-50 chance of winning the diving.

Tarbett Is Favorite.

But Tarbett is the only Central bet for a first place. Wilson, formerly of Baltimore Poly and now swimming for Baltimore City, is virtually conceded the 100-yard free-style; Brent Farber, of Calvert Hall School, Baltimore, the 220-yard and 50-yard free-styles, and Ted Hucht, of Calvert Hall, the 100-yard breast-stroke.

Coach Fred T. Brunner is not banking on first places. Last year Central won plenty of firsts but didn't win the championship. The coach has shifted Jordan to the relay teams since it is the team events, which, in all probability, decide the meet. Central defeated Baltimore City by nine points at Baltimore earlier in the season, by 28 points here in a return meet, and by six points in the South Atlantic Interscholastics. In the latter, Central had a point total of 32 to Baltimore's 26.

Other schools entered are Western, Eastern, Bethesda-Chevy Chase, Calvert Hall, Gwynns Fall School and Friends of Baltimore.

Hunter Trials Are Carded March 30

Three Classes Arranged for Program Near Charlottesville.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., March 15.—Members of hunt clubs in Virginia and West Virginia have been invited to make entries for the Farmington Hunt Club hunter trials, to be held on the estate of Mr. and Mrs. R. D. York, Windsor, on the Ivy road, near here, on Saturday, March 30.

The program provides for three classes. The first will be for hunters that have not been hunted prior to the 1934-35 season with a recognized hunt. Class 2 is for half-bred hunters, and class 3 for registered thoroughbred hunters. The final event is for pair hunters, to go the course in tandem and abreast, alternating lead.

The course will be about 1½ miles, with approximately ten obstacles, including stone, plank, rail, picket, pole, hedge and ditch; a gate to be opened and closed while mounted and horse to be checked at designated point. The obstacles will be more than 4 feet high, and the course must be ridden as flagged.

Each Jump Visible.

For the spectator, this course provides a picturesque setting, with each jump plainly visible from the overlooking hillside.

The hunter trials will close one of the most successful seasons of the Farmington Hunt Club's eight years of existence. The club has grown rapidly since its inauguration and is now one of the leading clubs in the State, having a membership of about 100.

Both the drags and live-hunting have brought out large fields and excellent runs have been enjoyed by many out-of-town guests, as well as club members. The hunt breakfasts in some instances have been attended by as many as 300 persons.

Russell Mott, of the Owensville road, is president of the club; Dr. Jack P. Jones, vice president, and W. Alonza Rinehart, secretary and treasurer.

Staff of Hunt.

The staff consists of Mrs. Jack P. Jones and Jack Rinehart, as joint masters; Grover Vandevender is huntsman, and the honorary whippers-in are Dr. Jack P. Jones, A. M. Keith and Roger R. Rinehart.

The kennels consist of about 25 couples of well trained American-bred hounds.

Judging for the approaching hunter trials have not yet been selected. Trophies are being donated by Mr. and Mrs. Hollis Rinehart, Dr. and Mrs. Stephen H. Watts, P. H. Faulconer and family, Harry A. George, sr., Mr. and Mrs. W. Alonza Rinehart and Keller & George, local jewelers.

Stock Prices Turn Upward; Trading Drops

Improved Status of the Pound Proves Help to Securities.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 15.—The pressure of general uneasiness appeared to be lightened in Wall street today and stocks were able to rebound fractions to a couple of points, aided by a recovery in the grains.

The better tone was aided by substantially improved action of the pound sterling in the foreign exchange market, where the British unit came back around 3 cents against the dollar. The gold currencies ruled barely steady.

Securities markets did not hold a wholly even keel throughout the session. Both bonds and stocks were somewhat soft around midday. Bonds held about even on balance, and a last-minute rally brought Government obligations back to approximately the closing levels of the previous day. Trade news was at a minimum, but what came to light was fairly encouraging.

The better tone of the market brought no widening of activity. Turnover in the stock exchange was below the level of the previous session, totaling 768,160 shares.

Wheat Prices In Lively Rise

Cotton Slumps at Start But Makes Partial Recovery at Close.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 15.—Sharp upturns of wheat prices late today went hand in hand with aggressive buying for mills and reports of widespread dust storms Southwest and West.

Price gains toward the last were in the face of earlier setbacks that took all cereals to fresh bottom quotations for the season, a circumstance associated more or less with uncertainty as to future economic and financial developments and with cotton market weakness. On the other hand, belief prevailed during late dealings that liberal purchases of domestic flour had been consummated.

Wheat closed firm, ¾-1⅛ above yesterday's finish, May 92¾-92⅞; corn ⅛-½ up, May 79⅛-79¼; oats, ¼-½ down, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 5 cents.

A leading crop expert said that the effect of continued lack of moisture in large areas of domestic wheat territory, a deficiency that now covers eight months of the present crop season, will become rapidly apparent if hot weather is experienced in advance of at least sufficient moisture to dampen the topsoil. Forecasts, however, were for colder weather, with some rain and snow.

Corn and oats mainly followed wheat action and provisions rallied with grains.

Cotton Market.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 15.—A sharp opening decline in cotton was followed by partial recoveries on trade buying and covering. The market closed very steady at net declines of 13 to 19 points. Initial prices were down 17 to 25 points, with active months selling 23 to 29 points lower during the first few minutes under heavy selling through houses with foreign connections. The volume tapered off after the close at Liverpool, and while later fluctuations were irregular the market showed a steadier tone particularly on the old crop months.

Steel Companies Oppose Federal Trade Commission's Plan to Abolish Basing Point System; Result, They Say, Would Be Local Monopolies.

Special Correspondent of The Post.

New York, March 15.—Abandonment of the basing point system in the steel industry, as advocated by the Federal Trade Commission, will impair present productive efficiency and substitute a series of virtual local monopolies in steel throughout the country, it is argued by steel makers.

Steel being a bulk product, the cost of its transportation should play a very important role in its price to the consumer. Hence, if the cost of steel products should be raised by the inclusion of the freight rate from the mill to the place of delivery, then consumers will naturally tend to fill their requirements from the nearest producer. Such a system would concentrate steel buying from each area in local plants. Many large plants now in operation could not then continue to serve their present markets, because of competition from steel mills located near various consumption centers.

From the early days of the steel industry, the basing point system has been in use in order to place all producers on an equal basis in any given market, regardless of where the producer's plant is located. Before 1924, the system in use was known as Pittsburgh plus, because there was only one basing point, Pittsburgh. Prices on steel anywhere in the country consisted of a base price plus the railroad freight from Pittsburgh to the place of business of the buyer. A buyer in St. Louis, for example, would have to pay the freight rate from Pittsburgh, even though he bought steel from a mill in St. Louis.

80 Basing Points Established Since 1924.

Since 1924, about 80 basing points have been established, covering various steel products, so that the buyer need now pay the freight rate only from the nearest basing point on the particular type of steel which he purchases to his own place of business. Prices are thus somewhat more flexible now.

From the economic standpoint, the relative merits of the basing point system and delivered prices must be carefully weighed in any decision as to future policy. The basing point device encourages the concentration of large modern steel plants in locations where productive and labor conditions are favorable, from which the whole area subject to one basing point can be served without any handicap due to transportation costs. At a time when the rapid building up of productive capacity was the chief problem of the steel industry, the basing point system greatly encouraged the construction of huge plants in such centers as Pittsburgh, the Ohio Valley and at Gary, Ind.

On the other hand, abandonment of the basing point system would restore to each plant the benefit of location near consumers which is lost under the basing point system. Thus, a steel mill located at a large city can actually serve it more economically, other things being equal, than one located 500 miles away. Under the basing point system, however, the two plans, if subject to the same basing point, would charge the same price. Thus, a plant at Baltimore would now sell steel in Washington at the same price as a plant from Pitttsburgh, where the latter is the basing point, despite the much lower actual freight cost from Baltimore. If delivered prices were used, then the Baltimore plant would enjoy the benefit of its location, and it could undersell the Pittsburgh plant quite easily. Cross-shipments would be avoided, with correspondingly less traffic for the railways, but large, centrally-located plants would be injured for the benefit of small, well located mills.

Trade Will Fight Commission's Project.

Implicit in the basing point controversy are two fundamental issues that are now coming to the fore in National policy. In the first place, abandonment of this method of price fixing will benefit the smaller steel business greatly at the expense of the large unit. Secondly, opposition to the basing point system is based in part upon a desire for lower steel prices as a likely aid to building and other construction. Here again, therefore, the desire for lower prices of manufactured goods has made itself felt, leading to the present vigorous attack upon a long-established practice of the steel making industry in the determination of its prices.

Textile Machinery Sales Up While Mills Slow Down

New York, March 15.—Despite a decrease in textile mill activity in 1934 of 14½ per cent from the 1933 level of activity, sales of textile machinery during 1934 by dollar volume were 12 per cent greater than in 1933, a trend which indicates that last year's sales of machinery, parts and attachments in the textile industry rose approximately $7,000,-000, from $60,000,000 in 1933 to $67,-000,000, Textile World reports.

Breaking the industry down into its major groups, it is stated in the report, it is interesting to note that the group comprising preparatory, spinning and weaving equipment and the group comprising bleaching, dyeing and finishing machinery each registered a 6 per cent gain in 1934 over 1933. Knitting machine manufacturers, on the other hand, averaged a 29 per cent increase, while manufacturers of miscellaneous equipment and accessories showed a 17 per cent increase.

Insurance Bill Seeks to Halt Premium Loss

Legislation Proposes More Home Offices in Washington.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

A concerted drive for the establishment of a greater number of insurance companies' home offices in Washington to stem the flight of premiums to out-of-town concerns, is being sponsored jointly by Corporation Counsel E. Barrett Prettyman and Insurance Commissioner John A. Marshall.

By means of a bill for the regulation of fire, casualty and marine insurance companies operating here, it is hoped that a number of companies will take advantage of the simplified incorporation rules. The bill, now being prepared in the corporation counsel's office, will be ready for introduction to Congress the latter part of the month.

The importance of adequate insurance regulations in Washington can not be over-rated. According to a survey by the Association of Life Insurance Presidents of America, there is a greater amount of per capita insurance held here than in any other city or country in the world. According to Commissioner Marshall, the revised insurance code for the life companies operating in the District, which went into effect a year ago, has resulted in far more efficient regulation and will ultimately result in a greater number of companies establishing their headquarters here.

Latest figures available show that total premiums collected in the District during 1933 totaled $31,721,-433, of which only $2,269,586 was paid to local companies. The remainder, an aggregate of $29,451,947, was withdrawn from the District. Figures for 1934, which are now being compiled, are said to show about the same proportion.

Losses paid by the companies operating here during the same period were $11,556,486. The amount of insurance written here during the year was reported at $4,188,-616,868.

Mail Surety Curb Sought.

Another insurance measure pending in the House of Representatives, and providing for curbing of companies operating through the mails, is arousing wide interest.

Aimed at the companies who operate in defiance of insurance laws set up in the several States by reaching their clients through the mails, the bill was introduced into the House by Representative Sam Hobbs, of Alabama.

A number of messages were received from different parts of the country yesterday by Commissioner Marshall, praising his testimony for the bill at the recent hearing before the House Post Roads Committee.

Another hearing on this measure will be held on Monday, when a number of delegates from affected companies will be heard.

Investors Syndicate Makes High Record

Minneapolis, Minn., March 15.—Figures on February business just released by Investors Syndicate totaled the largest single month's volume in face amount of contracts written since the company's founding in 1894.

A total of $22,739,700 in face amount of new contracts was written in February as compared with the previous greatest month's volume of $21,380,750 established last November. "This consistent increase in volume of business is, we feel, a reflection of the general improvement of conditions and a corresponding strengthening of the surplus of individual incomes," King Merritt, general sales manager, said.

South America Issues Lead Bond Market

Other Obligations Are Sluggish, Mostly With Declines.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 15.—Hampered by sluggish rails and industrials, the bond market gave another indifferent performance today.

United States Governments were lifeless, and with few exceptions were lower. Liberty 3½s, which were called for redemption yesterday, lost another 4-32 at 101.14, and declines of around that much were recorded in the majority of Treasury loans. Indirect obligations were a trifle more steady.

Railroad and industrial liens showed little resistance to moderate offerings, and closing prices revealed a number of losses of 1 to 2 or more points. A sustained rally in some of the more active South American bonds, particularly those of Argentina and Colombia, which advanced on the average of 1 to 2 points, featured an otherwise dull foreign section.

Farmers' Cash Continues Gain

Light Marketing Is Being Offset by Higher Prices.

New York, March 15.—Cash income of farmers is continuing to run moderately ahead of comparable 1934 levels and should maintain its lead at least until the next crops are harvested, according to the Standard Statistics Co. of New York. Although farm reserves of crops are small and marketing of live stock is light, income is being bolstered by relatively high prices. As of February 15, average prices received by farmers were 11 per cent above prewar levels.

The outlook for the final six months of the year, however, is less certain. While the basically unrelieved drought conditions now point to subnormal yields, good rains during the growing season could result in fair-sized crops. As the export market for grains has been practically lost and domestic requirements have been reduced by the sharply smaller live stock population, even moderately short yields might represent an oversupply.

Weakness in grain prices next fall would affect a long list of agricultural products. Farmers would be induced to feed live stock more freely, which might result in lower quotations on meat, milk, butter, eggs and other products highly important from the standpoint of farm income. Furthermore, when the drought forced prices up last summer, farmers still possessed old-crop supplies with which to take advantage of the higher prices. They will hold no such reserves next summer.

Curb Rebounds In All Classes

A. O. Smith Advances 8½ Points; Hiram Walker Up 2.

New York, March 15.—Recovery ruled in virtually all sections of the curb list today, with closing gains ranging from fractions to a point or more. Specialties recorded the widest advances. Dealings were generally quiet, transfers approximating 140,000 shares compared with 131,000 Thursday.

A. O. Smith was an outstanding firm spot, advancing some 8½ points in active trading. Hiram Walker got up about 2, while other gainers of around a point included Gulf Oil, Lake Shore, Western Auto Supply "A" and Pittsburgh Plate Glass.

Ickes Authorizes Cut In Gasoline Output

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Ickes, the oil administrator, yesterday authorized production of 34,520,000 barrels of gasoline during April, a decrease of 1,340,000 from the March quota of 35,860,000.

The Petroleum Administrative Board and the Bureau of Mines advised Ickes refinery gasoline inventories should be reduced 1,520,000 barrels during April.

Almost Blind, Publisher Field Takes Own Life

Former General Manager of N. Y., Chicago Papers Shoots Himself.

By the Associated Press.

Mendon, Vt., March 15.—William H. Field, 58, owner of the Rutland, Vt., Herald, and former general manager of the New York Daily News, shot and killed himself at his home here this morning. His son, William Field, announced impending loss of eyesight caused his father to take his own life.

Soon after his graduation from Yale in 1899 Mr. Field became associated with Frank A. Munsey company in New York and remained with that firm until 1909. Later he was with the Chicago Tribune as second vice president and war-time general manager.

In 1919 he joined the New York Daily News and was it administrative head until 1927 when increasing eye trouble forced him to give up that post.

While with the Chicago Tribune Mr. Field founded and was president of the Pacific and Atlantic Photo Service. Organized primarily to serve the Tribune this service was conducted on a syndicate basis.

Private funeral services will be held Sunday.

New York, March 15 (AP).—Joseph Medill Patterson, president of the New York News, made this statement today in connection with the death of William H. Field, owner of the Rutland (Vt.) Herald:

"It was with the deepest regret that I learned of the death of Mr. Field. We were close friends since college days. Field was the general manager of the News for the first eight years of its existence. He resigned greatly to our regret in order to look after his family newspaper in Rutland."

Tax Returns Set Dominion Record

3,200 Filed at Richmond in 4-Hour Period.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 15.—Hastening to file returns before the penalty deadline at midnight, Virginians today poured an all-time record of 3,200 income tax reports into the Richmond office of the Internal Revenue Bureau between 9 a. m. and 1 p. m.

During this four-hour rush the number of returns aggregated more than $1,000,000 in amount and exceeded any day's returns by 200, Collector N. B. Early, jr., said.

Final collection figures will not be available until all returns arriving in mail dispatched before the zero hour are opened and tabulated, but Mr. Early predicted the totals would exceed last year's figures and possibly prove the largest in several years.

Mr. Early said he attributed the increase in returns made and total collections to better business in Virginia.

Dry League Girds For Virginia Fight

Richmond, Va., March 15.—An attack against Virginia's alcoholic beverage-control legislation will be launched this summer by the State Antisaloon League with a preprimary "campaign of information," it was said today by the Rev. E. J. Richardson, superintendent.

He declared that a new expression by Virginia voters on the wet-dry question is inevitable, asserting, "there is disappointment on the results of repeal, even in official circles."

Solution to

"What Would You Do?"

"THE BIG CHANCE"

Broadcast Friday, at 10:30 P. M., from WJSV

"But John—son—there's right and there's wrong in this world. You did wrong. Your wife has no right to money earned——"

With a furious wave of strength the dying man raised himself in bed. "I know right from wrong, Mother Morgan. I lived—right—for years. Then bad times came. My business melted from under my feet. I—I couldn't find any work at all. I couldn't earn—even a dollar. I walked the streets for months trying. Then all—all our savings were gone. That was when I—I went wrong." The dying eyes burned into hers. "But who are you to judge—Mother Morgan? Should a man allow his wife to starve because a system has broken down?" He slumped back into bed, perspiration breaking out on lips and forehead.

"I—I won't judge you, son," the woman answered gently. "You did right—according to your heart. But wrong according to the world. And you're being punished now. I won't add to your punishment. I will never tell Florence."

John smiled as he died.

Change of Heart.

ONE who's accused of frightful crime comes to the courthouse to be tried; the stern officials round him climb, the lawyers bellow far and wide. The courtroom is full-packed with jays, like circus-going kids they prance; upon the prisoner they gaze, malevolence in every glance. They all feel certain of his guilt, for him there is no ray of hope; it will be proven to the hilt, and he will know the hangman's rope. All people look with scorn and hate upon the cringing caitiff there; it's comforting to know his fate is quite assured, the rope or chair. The mill of justice grinds away, a thousand points of law to solve; hour after hour, day after day, we hear its creaking wheels revolve. Day after day, week after week, the fuss and fury don't abate; the jurist nods, the lawyers shriek, the prisoner can only wait. The prisoner can only sit in his unseemly wooden chair, and wish the whole blamed thing would quit, and let him have some rope to spare. He's been so hopeless and forlorn, so friendless in the grip of law, that now some kindly hearts are torn, they think his sufferings too raw. The feeling spreads throughout the court, you see it in the jury's eyes, the judge, who is a dead game sport, is wiping moisture from his eyes. A whisper's heard above the fuss, above the raucous courtroom din: "No mortal should be tortured thus, it is not fair to rub it in." The hatred all has died away, he has his freedom in his hands, he left the dock and now that jay is lecturing at one-night stands.

Father Walsh Cites U. S. Law In Briton's Case

Deportation of Strachey Is Held Mandatory Under Existing Statute.

The case against John Strachey, British lecturer and author now faced with Labor Department deportation proceedings, was discussed in a Georgetown University lecture last night by the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., regent of the Georgetown University School of Foreign Service.

Father Walsh said the law provides that any alien who belongs to the Communist Party or "accepts, publicizes and advocates a program that is substantially identical without, however, being formally affiliated with the Communist Party" shall be mandatorily deported.

"It would seem that the immigration authorities have no discretion in the matter," he continued. "That is the law of the land, whatever opinion one may hold as to its wisdom or expediency. The issue should not be complicated by broad considerations of an irrelevant nature such as freedom of speech.

"That constitutional guarantee, it should be stated in passing, may be invoked only by a citizen of the United States. Its benefits do not extend to aliens whose status and conduct are regulated by other statutes to which they are obliged to conform unless exempted by international law or treaty provisions.

"The privilege of agitating for a change in the form of our Government is a prerogative reserved to citizens under the jurisdiction of the United States."

Widow of Nelson Called as Witness

Listed to Appear at Trial in Cowley Slaying.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 15.—Names of 52 witnesses which the Government expects to call in the murder trial of John Paul Chase, opening Monday in Federal Court, were furnished today to defense attorneys.

Included in the list were Mrs. Helen Gillis, widow of George "Baby Face" Nelson, who is now imprisoned at the Federal Penal Farm at Milan, Mich., and Melvin H. Purvis, of the Department of Justice, Division of Investigation.

Mrs. Gillis accompanied her husband and a second man, alleged by the Government to be Chase, during the battle at suburban Barrington last November 27, which resulted in the fatal shootings of Nelson and Inspector Samuel P. Cowley and Special Agent Herman E. Hollis of the Division of Investigation.

Professor Scoffs At College Reds

More Danger in HueyLong, Says Chicago Dean.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 15.—George A. Works, dean of students at the University of Chicago, thinks the fuss about "college Reds" is a "tempest in a tea pot."

"There is a great deal more to fear," he said today, "from Huey Long and his ideas."

Although a University of Chicago professor furnished bond for John St. Loe Strachey, Communist lecturer, at his recent deportation hearing, Dean Works declared that there were no Communists on the faculty and that radicals comprise only about 1 per cent of the student body.

As for a popular notion that colleges breed radicals, he set forth:

"Education tends to make one conservative. Universities have many times as many conservatives as they do radicals."

Texas Night Club Raided by Rangers

Members of Legislature in Party Broken Up.

By the Associated Press.

Austin, Tex., March 15.—Texas rangers in cowboy boots and 10-gallon hats threw a crimp today into the gay night life of the Texas capital.

Accompanied by sheriff's officers, the rangers raided one downtown night club in the early hours and the sortie was followed by a warning tonight from their leader, Adjt. Gen. Carl Nesbitt, that if local officers "don't enforce the law, we will."

Scores of men and women—among them legislative employes on a party and, it was reported, some members of the legislature—danced in an adjoining room as about $400 worth of assorted liquors was seized at a bar. No arrests were made immediately.

Optometrist Killed On Visit to His Sons

Hingham, Mass., March 15 (U.P.).—A midnight visit to his two young sons ended in death today for Dr. Harold E. Johnson, 40-year-old Boston optometrist, after a drinking bout with his former wife's present husband.

Found beside the divan on which Dr. Johnson's lifeless body lay, Robert E. Burns, 32-year-old insurance agent formerly of Milwaukee, was jailed on a manslaughter charge. He attributed Dr. Johnson's cracked skull to an accidental fall against an antique spinning wheel.

'The Continental Revue' Scheduled for Tonight

Under auspices of the Sick Benefit Association of the American Federation of Government Employes "The Continental Revue" will be held tonight at the Washington Auditorium. Proceeds will be used to further relief work of the association. Radio and night club stars will be among the performers.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

ALL things considered, the 17 Irishmen, who made their 17-word speeches last Thursday on N. B. C., did rather well. Most of them spoke according to rule, one skimped a little and uttered only 16 words, another waxed eloquent and lengthy with all of 38!

A few quotes, in honor of St. Patrick:

Abner Drury—"St. Patrick was the originator of the New Deal. He drove all the snakes out of Ireland."

Thomas Brahany—"Only 17 words for an Irishman! If Patrick had realized this, sure he would have been born on the thirty-first."

Judge Michael M. Doyle—"Ireland is a paradox; a free state, yet not free; an Irish Sea and no navy; the shamrock, its national flower, is not a flower; a bit of heaven, yet Irishmen always leave it. In Ireland, bologna is blarney."

Senator Louis Murphy—"Faith in God, patriotism, chastity, charity, courage, spirituality; these are the contributions of bright and melancholy Ireland."

WJSV is in a quandary about its station breaks. Should their announcers say, "WJSV, Alexandria, Virginia," or should they vary it with "under-the-shadow-of-the-Capitol," "across-the-muddy Potomac," and what not. So they'll ask the Man in the Street today at 6:30, and, since he represents the public, his word will be law.

Will the Man in the Street want variety? Or just a plain undecorated break?

Regarding the National Symphony versus the Brahms Requiem on Sunday, Louise P. Blodget writes: "There are so few broadcasts, relatively, that appeal to the lover of symphonic music it is small wonder that Sunday's performance produced a howl of protest. Also, atmospheric conditions were bad, making WABC itself impossible to get at the moment—I tried, in a frenzy of rage and disappointment."

Pittsburgh Mayor Fights for Office

Bill Abolishing McNair's Job Has Passed House.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, March 15. — Mayor William N. McNair, who only a little more than a year ago celebrated Pittsburgh's first Democratic landslide in 25 years by climbing a ladder in city hall and making a speech on his pet "single tax" theory, now is stumping the State in an attempt to hold his job.

The progress in the State Legislature of a "ripper" bill that would abolish the office of mayor and provide for the appointment of a city commissioner to succeed him caused McNair to inaugurate the campaign. The bill, sponsored by the Allegheny County (Pittsburgh) Democratic organization passed the House and now is before the Senate committee on cities.

His contention is that it is not within the jurisdiction of the Legislature to take action opposing the will of the voters in a single city.

Jurors Convict 4 as Violators Of Lottery Law

Override Defense Claim 'Numbers' Operation Was Immaterial.

Overriding a defense contention that operation of a "numbers game" did not constitute a violation of the District's lottery laws, a jury in the District Supreme Court yesterday returned a verdict finding four men guilty of violating the lottery law and acquitted a fifth.

Those convicted were William and Nicholas Jimroglou, Walter Grant Bethea and John Reynold Forte, while Peter C. Coyle was acquitted.

Breaking a precedent, Justice Proctor allowed the four convicted men to remain at liberty on bond pending an appeal. He told Defense Attorney Charles E. Ford that, if assurances were given that a speedy appeal would be perfected, he would consent to a $1,000 bond for each of the four. Mr. Ford agreed that he would lose no time appealing the case, and the men were released.

The five men were arrested in a raid at 1101 Fifth street northwest on January 3. Roger Robb, prosecuting attorney, contended they were violating the gaming law in that they were operating a lottery. He displayed a large number of "numbers" slips to show that the defendants were conducting the highly popular "guess game."

Two Plead Not Guilty In Stolen Check Case

Arraigned in Police Court yesterday on charges of cashing several travelers' checks, alleged to have been part of the loot in a Kansas City safe robbery some time ago, Moe Morganstein, 33, of Kansas City, and William Sacks, 42, of the 1400 block of Irving street northwest, pleaded not guilty.

Formal extradition hearing will be held March 16. Meanwhile, Morganstein and Sacks were freed on bond, Morganstein's $10,000 and Sacks' $5,000.

Police said when they arrested the pair several days ago they found other funds and checks totaling $3,000.

Man Is Serious Hurt By Policeman's Shot

Clarence Miller, colored, 21, of the 600 block of T street northwest, was in a serious condition at Freedman's Hospital last night after being shot by Policeman F. S. Marshall early yesterday in a chase through the downtown district.

Police said Miller was one of six colored men whom Marshall observed driving a large automobile without headlights. Marshall hailed a taxicab and gave chase when they refused to obey his command to halt. Miller's companions escaped.

Housewives Advised To Be Gold Diggers

By the Associated Press.

Buffalo, N. Y., March 15.—Helen Hayes, stage and screen star, advised housewives to "be gold diggers," in an interview today, to make husbands improve their homes.

"Be gold diggers," Miss Hayes said. "Make your husbands dig deep into their pockets to give you improvements in your home. * * * Women should be the ones directing housing campaigns, for they are the ones whose job it is to make homes."

Nevada House Defeats Plea for Townsend Plan

Carson City, Nev., March 15 (AP). A resolution urging Congress and the President to support the Townsend old-age pension plan, recently approved by both Houses of the Nevada Legislature, was sent back to the Assembly without the approval of Gov. Richard Kirman, sr., today and was defeated in a second House vote.

The Governor asserted "the enactment of such a law will entirely disrupt the plans of President Roosevelt for the rehabilitation of our country."
